"Dentists say the IPANA way works!"

Model Mother Marge Kerrins shows how it can work for you, too

The prettiest (and proudest) smile in Chicago's famous Pump Room belongs to fashion model Marge Kerrins—as she gives her two wide-eyed youngsters a gala Saturday treat featuring a "Flaming Sword" luncheon.

Model Mother that she is, she knows an attractive smile depends so much on firm, healthy gums. So she makes sure her family follows the Ipana way to healthier gums and brighter teeth. "Because," she explains, "dentists say it works!" Here's how this professionally approved Ipana dental care can work for you, too...

YES, 8 OUT OF 10 DENTISTS SAY:

Ipana dental care promotes
Healthier gums, brighter teeth***

Products of Bristol-Myers

P.S. For correct brushing, use the DOUBLE DUTY Tooth Brush with the twist in the handle. 1000 dentists helped design it!

The Ipana way really is child's play, agree Tom and Pat Kerrins! Easy as 1, 2 for anyone to do:

1. Between regular visits to your dentist, brush all tooth surfaces with Ipana Tooth Paste at least twice a day.
2. Then massage gums the way your dentist advises—to stimulate gum circulation. (Ipana's unique formula actually helps stimulate your gums. You can feel the invigorating tingle!)

Just do this regularly for healthier gums, brighter teeth—an Ipana smile. Ipana's extra-refreshing flavor leaves your mouth fresher, your breath cleaner, too. Ask your dentist about Ipana and massage. Remember, a good dentifrice, like a good dentist, is never a luxury!

ARMY HOUSING SCANDAL

Sirs:

Thanks to LIFE for publicizing the sorry state of housing for Army families (Mar. 7). I can vouch for the situation from personal experience. We spent a recent winter in an apartment over a mechanic's garage. The only heat was from the flue from the waste oil burner. If the mechanic didn't work on Sunday we had to stay in bed all day to keep warm.

The Secretary of the Army long ago labeled the housing situation as critical. The Secretary of the Air Force has stated that no program within the Air Force, unless war comes, is as desperate as the housing program. Navy enlisted personnel have designated lack of housing as the number one deficiency in satisfaction in a Navy career.

The Army has plans for an excellent housing program. Perhaps LIFE's publicity will facilitate the appropriations that will make their execution possible.

DOUGLAS LINDSEY, M.D.
North Guilford, Conn.

Sirs:

How can Congress have the nerve to consider spending $5 million on remodeling the White House, when our soldiers and their families live in such abodes as chicken houses?

BOB ESERT
Santa Cruz, Calif.

Sirs:

THIS NATION SHOULD BE INDEBTED TO LIFE MAGAZINE FOR ITS EXPOSE OF THE SHOCKING HOUSING ACCOMMODATIONS WHICH ARE ALL THAT ARE AVAILABLE FOR OUR MILITARY MEN AND THEIR FAMILIES. TODAY WE FINISHED SEVERAL WEEKS' WORK ON A STUDY OF THIS VERY PROBLEM AND SENATORS BURNET MAYBANK OF SOUTH CAROLINA, MILLARD E. TYDINGS OF MARYLAND AND MYSELF HAVE NOW INTRODUCED LEGISLATION PROPOSING SPECIAL FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE TO BUILDERS WILLING TO TAKE THE RISK OF PROVIDING SATISFACTORY RENTAL HOUSING UNITS ON OR NEAR MILITARY BASES. IF THIS LEGISLATION IS APPROVED WE ESTIMATE IT WILL PROVIDE 100,000 RENTAL HOUSING UNITS WITHIN A YEAR. THANKS FOR BRINGING THESE FLAGRANT CONDITIONS TO THE NATION'S ATTENTION.

KENNETH S. WHERRY
U.S. SENATOR
WASHINGTON, D.C.

Sirs:

I am a Navy wife and have lived in and under conditions similar to those depicted in your pictures. I find it hard to find any pity in my heart for the poor creatures you show. We did not expect the landlords to make major changes as we knew our rent would go up in proportion, but we did do all we could to make our habitat habitable.

We have reared a bunch of weaklings in our young marrieds of today. Too much has been handed to them on a silver platter without their having had to work for it, and they lack the intestinal fortitude to meet life as a challenge.

MRS. RUTH E. CULVER
Millington, Tenn.

Sirs:

You sure started something in my household! Here I am, a serious-minded young girl with intentions of marrying into the Air Force and living near the base, and along comes your last issue. Before it was just the idea of marrying so young, but now my par-

THE VALUE'S BIG...THE COST IS SMALL

Few things give you so much real value at such low cost as the telephone. Sometimes, as in emergencies, the value is beyond price.

The telephone is indispensable in the smooth running of a household. It saves countless steps and time.

Helps with the shopping. Runs down town. Calls a doctor. Makes home a safer place. Provides unlimited capacity for friendship, success and good times. Enables every business to do more business and do it better.

Your telephone is more valuable than ever today because there are 40% more telephones than there were three years ago. This means you can call more people and more can call you.

And the cost is still low. Increases in telephone rates are much less than the increases in most other things you buy. They average only a penny or so per call.

"OLIVER TWIST"

Sirs:

Dickens lovers all over the world must resent the slur of anti-Semitism brought against Charles Dickens (LIFE, Mar. 7). He was a great liberal and spoke and wrote as such. If he described Fagin as that "wily old Jew," which he certainly was, Dickens also described quite another type in Our Mutual Friend where Riah the "gentle Jew" is one of his finest characters, and where one of the fiercest attacks on anti-Semitism was written. . . .

H. M. THOMAS

Blacksburg, Va.

Sirs:

I was interested in your article, "Fagin in Berlin Provokes a Riot." After what these minority groups suffered at the hands of the Nazis, I don't blame them or their action. However I cannot for the life of me see why American Jews object to the showing of the film Oliver Twist in the U.S. It seems to me that this opposition will cause more differences than would the showing of the picture. Every day on the stage, screen, radio and television we watch and listen to deep-dyed villains doing their dirty work. None of them belong to any minority group. Come, come, let's not be silly.

WILLIAM D. McVEY

Cleveland, Ohio

Sirs:

As a Jew I felt disgraced when I read of those organizations of my faith which had succeeded in their attempt to ban Oliver Twist from the American screens. How can we permit a few to decide for the many? It seems to me that this Jewish "victory" is more apt to feed the anti-Semitic fire than to quench it. Why not go all the way and ban the book too?

Which Twin has the Toni?

(and which has the $15 beauty shop wave? See answer below.)

Compare Toni with any other permanent—any home wave, any beauty shop wave—and you'll find there's no finer wave at any price!

The secret of lovelier hair is yours—with a Toni Home Permanent. For your Toni wave is so soft, so easy to manage, so natural-looking that people will probably ask if you have naturally curly hair! But before trying Toni you will want to know:

Will TONI work on my hair?

Of course. Toni waves any kind of hair that will take a permanent, including gray, dyed, bleached or baby-fine hair.

Is it easy to do?

Amazingly easy! If you can roll your hair up on curlers, you can give yourself a Toni. It's so surprisingly simple that each month over two million women use Toni Home Permanent.

Why do most women prefer to use TONI?

Because the Toni Waving Lotion is not a hurry-up salon-type solution. Instead it's a mild creme lotion—made especially for home use.

So gentle it just coaxes your hair into beautifully soft waves and curls. That's why your Toni wave looks more natural, even on the very first day.

Will my TONI wave be loose or tight?

With Toni, you can have just the amount of curl you want . . . from a loose, casual wave to a halo of soft ringlets. Just follow the simple directions for timing.

How long will my TONI last?

Your lovely Toni wave is guaranteed to last just as long as a $15 beauty shop permanent . . . or your money back.

How much will I save with TONI?

The Toni Kit with plastic curlers costs only $2. You can use the plastic curlers again and again. So for your second Toni wave all you need is the Toni Refill Kit. It costs just $1 . . . yet there is no finer wave at any price.

Which twin has the TONI?

Lovely Frances and Bernadette Hanson live in New York City. Frances, on the right, has the Toni. She says: "I want a permanent that's soft and natural-looking right from the start. And that's just the way my Toni is! It's so easy to manage Bernadette can't wait to have one, too!"

CHURCHILL'S TRADEMARK

Sirs:

May I, for history's sake correct a word in the caption of your picture (LIFE, Feb. 28) representing Mr. Churchill raising his hand and making the V sign?

The caption reads, "The V sign is a Churchillian trademark." The V sign trademark belonged, in fact, to my friend Victor de Laveleye, who was later on to become my colleague in the first postwar Belgian government.

Laveleye, who for four years broadcast every night from London to Belgium, wanted to find a rallying sign which could easily be understood by all resistants. The difficulty was to have a sign which would mean something in English and in the two Belgian national languages: French and Flemish. Ultimately Laveleye found V, the initial of victory in English, of victoire in French and of vrijheid (freedom) in Dutch.

The idea was enthusiastically received in Belgium, spread at once to France, the Netherlands and the other occupied countries, and from there rolled back to the indomitable Island and its indomitable prime minister.

Who is "The Laughing Baby"?

It's the Baby who never has Diaper Rash..

Playtex Baby Oil has 6 times more soothing lanolin than any other sold. Playtex Baby Powder is super-fine. Gently absorbs, safely deodorant, guards against prickly heat and chafing. Playtex Baby Cream is lanolin-rich for protection, has a balm oil base.

YOUR MONEY BACK
If your baby ever develops diaper rash while using PLAYTEX BABY OIL, POWDER AND CREAM exclusively.

HOSPITALS PROVE NEVER A CASE OF DIAPER RASH

with Playtex

Scientific tests with thousands of babies—medically supervised by more than 100 hospitals and pediatricians—prove never a case of diaper rash when PLAYTEX Baby Oil, Powder, and Cream are consistently—and exclusively used. And, in cases where diaper rash had already appeared, it immediately cleared up after babies were switched to Playtex Baby Oil, Powder, and Cream.

"These new pants are the best ever!"

Playtex Baby Pants are comfortable and completely waterproof. Made of pure liquid latex, they're light, cool, super-stretchy, and long wearing. Playtex pants wash odor-free in ten seconds, pat dry with a towel. Accurately sized by baby's weight.

"Soft-comfy—and waterproof, too!"

Playtex Plastikool Sheets are light, completely waterproof, stay soft and pliable—even after hundreds of washings. Nylon-reinforced; they're tear-resistant and wear-resistant. PLASTIKOOL sheets wash in a jiffy, dry with a towel. In three handy sizes.

... HERE IS AN ALPHABET OF ODD ANIMALS

The peculiar creatures shown here are from a delightful book entitled Wild Animals of the World, written by William Bridges (Garden City Publishing Co., $4.95). It contains pictures and descriptions of 252 mammals, and it was no trouble at all for the editors of LIFE to make up an exotic animal alphabet using the queerest of these. Only the letter X was unrepresented. So the book's illustrator, Mary Baker, went to the American Museum of Natural History in New York, obtained the skin of a Xerus and obligingly painted its picture.

A Aye-Aye

Found only in Madagascar, the aye-aye's survival is due to native myth that anyone touching it will die.

E Echidna

Although its yellowish spines look much like a porcupine's, this native of Australia lays eggs and is a type of anteater.

F Fossa

With a reputation for bloodthirstiness this Madagascan animal is unpopular even though it is almost extinct.

G Guereza

Stylish fur capes and Abyssinian warriors' shields have been made from the guereza's luxuriant hair.

K Kouprey

The horns of the kouprey, a forest ox of French Indo-China, are frazzled from stabbing termite nests in the deep jungle.

L Lemur

Another denizen of Madagascar, the expressionless lemur spends most of its life in high trees and is harmless.

M Mangabey

The most expressive of all monkeys, the West African mangabey can scowl, laugh, grimace, wink or smile.

Q Quagga

This South African link between the zebra and the wild ass is believed extinct, has stripes only half way down its back.

R Ratel

A strong fondness for sweets leads the thick-furred African ratel, or honey badger, to steal honey from beehives.

S Saiga

Its horns, valuable for medicinal purposes, are now smuggled out of Siberia for illegal sale to the Chinese.

B Bear, Sloth

Although thick-coated, the sloth bear often drifts off to sleep on warm, sunny hillsides in its native India.

C Coati-Mundi

In Central America, they are kept as pets, but the coati-mundi should be caged or it will ruin its owner's house.

D Dugong

Although the resemblance is remote, imaginative mythologists have attributed mermaid legends partly to the dugong.

H Hyrax

Rabbit-sized, the meek African hyrax is distantly related (through its teeth and feet) to the rhinoceros.

I Ibex

Used to jumping from crag to crag, the Siberian ibex in captivity sometimes will jump on its zoo keeper's back.

J Jerboa

When frightened this Egyptian "jumping mouse" is often mistaken for a bird as it leaps swiftly across the desert sand.

N Nilghai

A resident of India, the nilghai owes its survival to its short horns, which are not popular as trophies.

O Onager

A wild ass from Baluchistan, the onager can be captured only by employing relays of swift horses to exhaust it.

P Potto

African natives say that the only way to loosen the potto's viselike grip is to cut away the victim's skin surrounding it.

T Tamandua

Akin to giant anteaters, this South American beast defends itself by hugging and clawing its adversary.

U Uakari

This monkey of South America is nearly impossible to tame and has a bright red face. Its hair is almost white.

V Vicuna

Recent laws prohibiting the making of goods from vicuna wool have helped this small Peruvian camel species survive.

W Wombat

Although reminiscent of the American woodchuck, the Australian wombat's female carries young in a pouch. Wombats lie on their sides to dig their burrows.

X Xerus

This squirrellike South African rodent spends most of its time sitting upright like a prairie dog in front of its burrow, stopping only to eat or scratch its ears.

Y Yapok

The most beautiful of the opossums, the yapok of South America is rarely seen. It hides during the day, coming out at night to hunt for crayfish and insects.

Z Zebu

Zebus, or Brahman cattle, are always distinguishable by a hump. In India they are held in high esteem and are often allowed to wander at will in public.

WAR ON THE RADIO

A vengeful Haitian rocks the Caribbean with long-range insults to his presidential enemy

by EDITH EFRON

In its 145 years the Republic of Haiti has known more plots against the government than history can count. Of its 22 heads of state between 1843 and 1915, when the U.S. occupied the country to restore order, only one served out his official term. Three died in office, one was exploded with his palace, one was presumably poisoned, one was chopped to bits by a mob and one resigned. The other 14 were thrown out by conspirators and revolutions after holding their jobs for periods ranging from three months to 12 years.

But in all this long and bloody history few plots have run as weird and polychromatic a course as the one which recently fizzled out to its wet-firecracker end in Haiti, after several weeks of crackling diatribes across the airways. Its chief protagonists were Colonel Astrel Roland, a tall, bald mulatto of the Haitian army, and President Dumarsais Estimé, his archadversary, head of the Negro government which Colonel Roland plotted to overthrow so that mulatto supremacy would be restored. Mixed into it was a Belgian woman named Joanna Verbracken, the colonel's accomplice, who was to dispatch the president and certain key functionaries of the government by poison. At the last moment she changed her mind and told all, thus foiling the plot and forcing the colonel to flee to the Dominican Republic, Haiti's traditional enemy, where he opened up a radio barrage that had the entire West Indies by the ears.

For his radio war on his native land, Colonel Roland used the Voz Dominicana, which normally keeps its big Haitian audience happy in the evenings with Spanish dance music. The program changed one night without warning, and its listeners were stunned by what they heard.

"That filthy beast who calls himself Dumarsais Estimé," came the colonel's voice, "that being of horror and crime has the folly to accuse me of organizing a conspiracy. That nonentity who still smells of the bush—who is he? Dumarsais Estimé is a vulgar politician, a criminal jack-of-all-trades, a savage butcher. . . . Vice, corruption, lies, ruse, crime and ignorance are the very lifeblood of his administration. . . ."

The peroration that night wound up with a promise that the revelations would be continued, "Ineffable Estimé! I am inclined to spread out for all to see your sinister actions! Gird your loins! . . . Haitian people! I will return to deliver you!"

The next night an indignant Haitian government was ready with its answer. "Haitian people!" cried the official Haiti radio. "It disgusts us to answer that unnatural creature, that traitor, that hater of his fatherland. . . . Roland the Shameless, you said that President Estimé got to power by using ruse, corruption and murder. But you forget that you take all the credit for getting him the presidency! Is it then you who has committed all the crimes for which you reproach him? Aha, Roland the Shameless, answer that one! Roland the Shameless, shut your mouth and speak no more. The people have identified you as the vicious beast that you are!"

Far from shutting his mouth, however, Roland the Shameless was on the air again the following afternoon. "You heard last night," he cried, "the team of mercenaries employed by Dumarsais Estimé to defend him by lies and calumny. They want to know why I have not yet returned to Haiti! Hah! Colonel Roland knows the mania of Dumarsais Estimé, who assassinates all those he believes to be his enemies, his constant thirst for blood which he quenches either in crime or in superstition."

"Mr. Estimé, to give himself importance, has tossed out another odious lie: that each month he sent me money (for the part I played in getting him elected). Mr. Estimé earns constitutionally $2,000 a month. He spends $1,000 a month on his mistress who lives in Paris with his four children by her. Where could he find the money to send me? Estimé, every time you are embarrassed by a question, you pirouette like a monkey. Answer me! How did you send me money? By check? Or by private messenger? If by check, show the receipted checks. If by messenger, tell his name. And if you produce the messenger, he will be a liar."

That evening, an impatient Haitian announcer was on the air, conscious of his noble mission of speaking for the entire country.

"Here we are," he said excitedly into the microphone, "faithful to the rendezvous, and there you are, Haitian people, clinging to your receivers in a similar élan of indignation and of execration of that abject nonhuman who betrayed so grossly his country."

"You said, Roland the Shameless, that President Estimé before his election had made a lot of money in the voting for several contracts—$20,000 and $30,000 and $30,000... And then you ask the president where on earth he could get money to send to you! You ask him, who according to you came to the presidency a rich man, where he could have found money to send you!

"Why don't you just shut up? The more you attempt to defend yourself, the more involved you get. Your sad position before the Haitian people and the world gets sadder by the moment. Every newspaper in the country is now exposing your foul excrement to the open air. Roland, be still. Don't make things worse for yourself, if that is possible.

"Haitian people, we think we have finished with Roland the Shameless, the conspirator, the traitor, the renegade! We have nothing more to tell him. He has said that all he has to do is show up at the frontier and all of us will flee. Well, we say to Roland and we say it in the name of the Haitian army, we tell him, 'Keep your word, if you still have anything left of the military man about you.' Present yourself at the border, where you have given us rendezvous—a rendezvous of the sort that the Haitian people keep with the greatest pleasure. We are waiting for you, Roland the Shameless!"

In spite of the government's confident air, Roland's threat to return very shortly had thrown an element of panic into Haitian hearts. The next day the Chamber of Deputies met to vote obligatory military service, an internal defense loan of $3 million with which to equip the army, and a committee to investigate "anti-national activities" of all Haitians over the age of 16. The crowd which pressed into the chambers screamed with excitement and approval at the ferocious words of the various deputies who cried, "We will bite them with our teeth! We will fight them with penknife and machete. We will teach the Chicken Hawk of the East to pull in his claws!"

Silence on the airwaves followed this decisive action for several days. Then suddenly Voz Dominicana erupted again. This time it was not Colonel Roland, however, but his accomplice Joanna Verbracken, who was to have been the instrument of his plot until she turned stool pigeon. Now she completely confused the issue once again by defending Roland, whom she had betrayed, against President Estimé, whom she had saved. But confusion was compounded when Colonel Roland came on the air immediately afterward, almost hysterical, babbling and stammering, to heap abuse on the capricious Misa Verbracken.

"Joanna Verbracken is lying," he cried. "She is a spy, a Haitian spy, a spy for Dumarsais Estimé. She has tracked me from place to place, eavesdropped on me, smiled at me in lounges. She is a Yugoslav spy, posing as a Belgian, and she has worked for the Haitian government. I liked her when I first met her, and we discussed our books together, but when I found out she was a filthy spy, I lost all consideration for her. She is not telling the truth."

This was a stunner. Why should Roland attack his former friend as a spy, when his best policy was to back up her tale of innocence? Interpretations were to be had by the thousands. The most popular was that Roland became so furious at her betrayal that he lost all control and attacked her publicly without considering his position.

The Haitian radio meanwhile fell silent. The Dominican radio waited for an answer and getting none, blared forth again. This last time Roland alone spoke, still a rebellious but a slightly chastened man. His threat to invade Haiti was apparently abandoned.

"This is not a fight between the Haitian people and the Dominican people," he said. "This is a duel of death between Dumarsais Estimé and myself. Dumarsais Estimé, I challenge you to meet me at the border. I offer you a rendezvous of honor. If you refuse, I spit in your face and ask you again. I shall force you to fight me. . . ."

It was plain that Roland was a defeated man. Shortly after, when 20,000 Haitian workers went on a one-day strike in protest against compulsory buying of bonds to finance Haiti's defense against Dominican invasion, Roland went on the air again. But his exhortations fell on deaf ears. In volatile Haiti it seemed likely that the whole incident might quickly be forgotten. Said one Haitian politician sarcastically, "If he sits tight and waits long enough, my forgetful countrymen might even elect him president in a few years."

LIFE'S COVER

Before Producer Hal Roach began making television films (pp. 95-98) last winter, he scoured Hollywood for the right girl to play a series of "dumb blonde" parts. One night in a Los Angeles restaurant he found her. She is Joy Lansing, 19—who appears on LIFE's cover—a green-eyed blonde of Salt Lake City who got most of her dramatic training in small parts in five M-G-M movies. She is now under a long-term television contract to Roach, who hopes her well-rounded good looks and engagingly sexy flair for slapstick comedy roles will make her one of television's leading light-headed characters.

$21 MILLION HOTEL OPENS

The booming city of Houston (LIFE, Oct. 21, 1946), although accustomed to wealth and a certain amount of display, hadn't seen anything until last week when Oilman Glenn McCarthy unveiled his brand-new, $21 million hotel, named the Shamrock in honor of the land his grandparents came from. McCarthy (right), who rose from laborer's son to wildcatter to multimillionaire businessman, is proud of Houston, the state of Texas and himself—and he spared no expense to do right by all three. He put up one of the most lavish buildings the hotel business has ever seen. (In a competition among plumbing manufacturers to design the toilets, the winner was a man who said, "We didn't even consider the cost.") He imported his manager from New York's Waldorf-Astoria and gave him a high-priced staff of 1,200. So expensive was the Shamrock to build and operate that its rooms, which rent for $6 to $45 a day, will have to be 82% occupied just to break even financially.

For the opening ceremonies McCarthy rented the Super Chief to bring in a trainload of Hollywood celebrities, had 2,500 shamrocks flown in from Ireland and tossed a $42-a-plate dinner at which the entertainment included a broadcast of the Dorothy Lamour radio show. Visitors gawked at the lush surroundings and themselves put on the most dazzling exhibition of evening dress and big names ever seen in Texas. Everybody had to concede that it was quite a party and quite a hotel.

18 FLOORS HIGH, the Shamrock rises from flat Texas prairie 4 miles from Houston's business center. Its plot will soon be completely landscaped and a big theater will go up alongside to help complete "McCarthy Center."

IN EMERALD ROOM, which can hold 1,000 diners or 1,500 dancers, McCarthy is visited by a rival Texas Tycoon Jesse Jones (right). Below: fan-shaped swimming pool, with seven racing lanes, stretches behind the hotel.

A RUBBER COMPANY GETS INTO THE ACT WITH NEWS

IT HAS A POOL, MURALS

In a state whose hotels have never gone in for luxury (or service either, according to some jaundiced travelers) the Shamrock sticks out like a healthy thumb. Guests arriving last week found that they could drive their automobiles right into the 1,000-car garage, order their tanks refilled with any of four brands of gasoline including McCarthy's own and take a noiseless elevator to a lobby as big as a basketball court and much better furnished. The public meeting places like the Emerald Room (left) were dripping with murals and indirect lighting, and the furnishings were in a startling style called "international modern." Every room was individually air-conditioned and wired for four radio stations and Muzak as well as for television. The sofas turned out at night to be full-length double beds measuring 6 feet 6 inches from top to bottom and the bath towels seemed to justify the hotel's proud boast that they were the biggest in the world. Just outside was a 165-foot-long swimming pool fed by the Shamrock's own wells, and hidden away were such refinements as a 100,000-pound-a-week laundry and a refrigerated garbage room. The original draft of the hotel's original announcement of this room said it was designed to "retard the development of odors." This was later delicately reworded to read "prevent decay."

All this was 41-year-old Glenn McCarthy's bid for the post of Houston's No. 1 citizen, which has been held for a long time by Jesse Jones. McCarthy, a rough-and-tumble character who pressed pants, drove rivets and ran a filling station before he hit his first oil well, has never quite had the social position that his wealth justifies. He owns nine companies, including newspapers, radio and movies, and is said to have at least $100 million worth of oil underground. But he is barred from several Texas clubs which have found that he works, drinks and brawls with equal vigor. Some people resent his keeping a life-size color picture of himself in his office, and he is currently being sued by a radio announcer who claims McCarthy beat him up at a Christmas party.

Some skeptical Houstonians were predicting last week, not altogether sorrowfully, that McCarthy had finally overextended himself by opening such a high-priced hotel in times like these, and that Uncle Jesse Jones would be around some day to buy it up at 10¢ on the dollar. But McCarthy has boundless faith in himself and Houston—and so much money that $21 million is hardly worth losing any sleep over.

WELCOME TO CHURCHILL

HE EMBODIES THE IDEAL OF LIBERAL AND CREATIVE MAN

This week Winston Churchill, leader of His Britannic Majesty's loyal opposition, is appearing on these shores for a brief visit. Americans will, of course, be glad to catch another glimpse of the man who held the pass in the touch-and-go days of 1940 and after. Americans will be glad to receive Churchill as the champion of Western civilization in its hour of supreme crisis.

Churchill comes to the U.S. this time at the very moment when the fruits of his more recent examples of foresight are slowly ripening to maturity. Three years ago at Fulton, Mo. he warned us of the great trouble we would shortly be having with the Communist drive for expansion in Europe and throughout the world. Last spring in The Hague he spoke eloquently for the cause of a United Europe. The North Atlantic Pact and Europe's increasing efforts to achieve unity in the face of the Soviet threat are tangible evidence that the Western world has chosen to follow Churchill's leadership in the greatest of its affairs. No doubt he will have something important to say to us on the occasion of his present visit. But for that we must wait.

He Takes His Lumps

Meanwhile Americans are also interested in Churchill, the leader of a political party which is contending for power in Britain. How has he been doing at home as head man of the Conservatives? The answer is: Not too well. He has been making speeches for Tory candidates in the by-elections and watching his younger protégés go down to defeat. As a politician he has been taking his lumps.

The drift in England, as in Europe and the world generally, is away from Churchill. Socialism, the Welfare State, the Insurance State—by whatever term you call it the tide is running strongly toward a constricted social system that could hardly appeal to a man who began life in the great liberal tradition. Churchill, they say, is politically démodé.

But is he? England at the moment is supporting the austerity program, the controls and the repressions, of Sir Stafford Cripps. In doing this she may be bowing to an inexorable political necessity of the moment. But even as Britain accepts the rigors of planned exports and planned dollar conservation, with all that they imply in the "planning" of the individual movements of men, an old English socialist voice speaks up in doubt. The voice of skepticism is that of Bertrand Russell, aged 76, who was an ardent socialist before most of us were born. In his Reith Lectures, delivered over the British Broadcasting system on six successive Sundays, Russell has vigorously attacked the "organized boredom" of life under modern organization.

Bertrand Russell has not renounced socialism. He is not against security; he is merely against making a fetish of it. "If life is to be saved from boredom relieved only by disaster," he says, "means must be found of restoring individual initiative not only in things that are trivial but in the things that really matter." Russell is as hazy as most socialists on ways and means of promoting initiative in a state-controlled economy, but his words are clear when he insists that ethics is "not concerned solely with duty to my neighbor." "The performance of public duty is not the whole of what makes a good life," Russell continues, "there is also the pursuit of private excellence. . . . It is dangerous to allow politics and social duty to dominate too completely our conception of what constitutes individual excellence."

"Private Excellence"

In making his spirited defense of individual initiative and "private excellence" Bertrand Russell probably had no thought of Churchill in his mind. But who is he talking about if not the Churchillian type of Western Man? Churchill is important as a politician even in defeat, but he has a symbolic significance these days that transcends politics.

He symbolizes, for one thing, the truth that Western civilization cannot save itself by giving up the pursuit of excellence in exchange for the false promises of a "safe" mediocrity. For the pursuit of excellence there is required, as Bertrand Russell has argued, plenty of freedom under law. There is also required a spirit of adventure and emulation.

No man has given himself more to public duty than has Winston Churchill. No man has performed more courageously the prophetic office. Long years ago he advocated social-security measures. In the '30s, as now, his was the clearest vision of the dangers that threatened Christendom.

Yet his prescription for victory over our difficulties (whether at home or abroad) is still faith in the power of free men—that is to say, of men coerced as little as possible but inspired as much as possible to live and work energetically and creatively. Churchill's faith is in communities in which men are bound together mainly by spiritual ties, and otherwise only by liberal constitutions for their mutual aid and protection.

Of this ideal of the liberal and creative man striving to function in liberal society Churchill continues to be the most exemplary embodiment. During the past year, as readers of LIFE are aware, Churchill wrote some of the most important memoirs of the war years. The memoirs were, naturally enough, done in his finest prose—a full-bodied English style that owes much to the spacious rhythms of the 18th Century, something to the King James Bible and the Book of Common Prayer and not a little to the spiritual certainties which still dominated the gentlemen of England in Edwardian times. This record of how England responded in crisis will provide an emulative example for generations to come. But the important thing to remember is that Churchill was himself the greatest symbol of the British response to danger. Without his leadership others would no doubt have fought just as courageously. But they would have fought in the dark. England needed Churchill's words, his magnificent sense of history, to achieve the unity and direction which he tells about in his book. Without his galvanic speeches England might have been years longer in wriggling free of that "German Europe" which cupped it in a vast semicircle reaching from Brest on the Atlantic to the North Cape in the Norwegian Arctic.

No nay-sayer, Churchill has given full vent to his hobbies during 1948-49. He has continued to lay bricks at Chartwell, his country home in Kent. He has painted on the Riviera and elsewhere—and he is bringing his brushes and oils to the U.S. in the hope of doing some new canvases on his few American weekends. Three days before his 74th birthday he rode for two hours in a fox hunt, a square-crowned Russell hat on his head, a huge cigar in his mouth. He saw his book on the art of painting ("audacity is the only ticket") republished in London. He even found time for a new hobby—Leica color photography under the tutelage of his professorial friend, Lord Cherwell.

The Spontaneous Man

One of Bertrand Russell's complaints about life in modern England is that preoccupation with the morrow has resulted in a loss of savor in the present. "Everything is organized," says Russell, "nothing is spontaneous." But what could be more engagingly spontaneous than Churchill riding a jeep around his acres in Kent? The important thing about his spontaneity is that it is never achieved by skimping the needs of the morrow. He paints at Chartwell, then he rushes to London to make a major speech in Parliament. He potters with his bricks, then he uses up five secretaries in dictating a few thousand words of his history at a stretch. The spontaneity refreshes him for his organized work, which in turn is made original by the flourishes made possible by a happy faculty for contemplation in relaxed hours.

Churchill's protean spontaneity, his mixture of public and private excellence is obviously the answer to Bertrand Russell's prayers. If oldtime socialists are beginning to ask for the Churchillian virtues, then Mr. Churchill's politics cannot be eternally démodé. Churchill may never again come to power, but every day of his life has a superlative importance as a connecting link between the great inheritance of Western civilization and its survival and revival in the long future.

PICTURE OF THE WEEK: ➔

Highballing a load of highly inflammable isobutane gasoline along a California road last week, Bill Cox tried to pass a car. But another one was coming toward him. To avoid a collision Cox sent his two-tank rig off the highway. In the crash he was pinned by the ankle in his cab. Then the isobutane caught fire. While rescuers worked, firemen covered him with an asbestos blanket and played a stream of water on him to keep him alive. But the water, which was brought up by tank trucks, gave out, and for eight agonizing minutes, while Cox almost roasted to death, he pleaded to be shot (opposite). Finally more water arrived, a farmer backed a tractor into the protective shower and yanked Cox to safety.

WIRE-TAPPING MYSTERY

New York's Mayor O'Dwyer says enemies spied on him; they say his charges are attempt to cover up city graft

In New York City, which holds an election for mayor next November, the precampaign calm has been shattered in recent weeks by a 44-year-old millionaire named Clendenin J. Ryan. Ryan, who used to be a political lieutenant of the late Fusion Mayor Fiorello La Guardia, doesn't like the way the present mayor, William O'Dwyer, has been running the city—and he has put $500,000 into a new fusion movement to see if he can do something about it. He has also been tacking charges on the door of City Hall (below, left) and referring contemptuously to the mayor as "Costellodwyer"—this as a way of charging that the fabulous Frank Costello (opposite) is the real boss of New York. Last week Mayor O'Dwyer struck a telling blow in return. His police department arrested an ex-city detective named Kenneth Ryan and accused him of tapping city officials' phones. In Kenneth Ryan's house, they reported, they found $10,000 worth of phone-tapping equipment (left). According to the police, Ryan admitted that he had been hired by one John G. Broady, who happens to have been hired for a long time by Clendenin Ryan. Both Broady and Clendenin Ryan denied knowing anything about wire tapping—except for being pretty sure that Ryan's own phone was tapped by the police—but they were quickly called in to testify before a grand jury. All this added up to such a hilarious cloak-and-dagger story that one New York newspaper had a reporter tap all the phones in Brooklyn's Borough Hall just for fun (bottom, right) and a minor city administrator took to answering his phone with, "Hello, everybody." But all this jesting aside, it looked as if O'Dwyer had won the first round. Because of recent scandals in the pier and fire departments, this had looked like a good time for somebody to make hay against the administration. But last week's comic opera publicity would be hard for any fusion movement to overcome.

THE MAYOR AND HIS COMMISSIONER OF POLICE EXAMINE WIRE-TAPPING DEVICES

CHALLENGE TO MAYOR is posted on City Hall by Clendenin Ryan, head of fusion. It is an old grand-jury report criticizing O'Dwyer as district attorney in 1945.

EX-TREASURY AGENT Edward M. Jones, picked up in wire tapping, leaves City Hall following questioning. Police said he made an "incredible confession."

ALL THAT'S LEFT of Kenneth Ryan a few minutes later is his hat and coat. He excused himself to go to toilet, jumped out a window and beat it down City Hall steps.

OVER WEEKEND Clendenin Ryan relaxes on his New Jersey farm in full view of reporters and state police to show he is not in touch with the missing Kenneth Ryan.

INVESTIGATOR for fusion, a former assistant state attorney general, John G. Broady, ducks into a phone booth after being served with subpoena by the city.

MAYOR AND GUARD Charles Stoffers (right), "busted" from detective last week when he was caught at "mysterious" phone call, leave City Hall in happier days.

LOOK WHO'S TAPPING now! It's reporter Edward O'Neill of Daily News, who gets into Brooklyn Borough Hall terminal box by posing as a telephone repairman.

MYSTERY MAN of New York politics—Frank Costello, who is reputed to have grown rich and powerful out of bootlegging and gambling industries—calmly puffs a cigaret in a downtown office building, unconcerned by Clendenin Ryan's charges or by other accusations last week of gambling activities in California and Miami. Of the Ryan charges

Costello said, "A resident of a quiet, orderly New Jersey town—finding life dull—sought escape from boredom in the exciting sphere of New York politics. He . . . used me as a whipping boy . . . charging that I was intimate with the mayor and secretly gave orders. . . . The truth is that I have so little influence that I can't square a traffic ticket."

TALLULAH THE ACTRESS plays a languid role in Foolish Notion. She is currently the star of a revival production of Private Lives, now in its sixth month on Broadway.

GRANDMOTHER BANKHEAD, an early Tallulah, was the wife of a Senator and mother of Speaker William Bankhead.

TALLULAH THE INDIAN was Cherokee who according to legend leaped over a cliff after her condemned white lover.

TALLULAH THE ACTRESS

Miss Bankhead claims use of her first name in singing

On Feb. 24 Actress Tallulah Bankhead instituted a lawsuit against the Procter & Gamble Company, the Columbia Broadcasting System, the National Broadcasting Company and Benton & Bowles, an advertising agency. The tone of Tallulah's complaint indicated that the defendants had used her with the utmost barbarity. "Plaintiff," said the complaint, "has been greatly distressed and humiliated . . . exposed to public ridicule and contempt . . . greatly injured in her reputation and has otherwise suffered great injury." Tallulah wanted one million dollars to soothe her injured feelings and relieve her great distress.

The reason for Tallulah's legal step was a singing radio commercial which advertised Prell, a shampoo made by Procter & Gamble. The jingle, written by Benton & Bowles's Len Mackenzie (above, right) goes, "I'm Tallulah the tube of Prell—And I've got a little something to tell—Your hair can be radiant, oh, so easy—All you've got to do is take me home and squeeze me."

To the press Tallulah growled that her name is unique, that she resents being identified with a tube and that she abhors the jingle's suggestion that she be taken home and squeezed. One reporter was so impressed with Miss Bankhead's claim of exclusivity in her first name that he wrote, ". . . when her father, the late Speaker of the House, gave her the name from a waterfall near their Alabama home, it was the first time it was used for such a purpose." Actually Tallulah was named in honor of her grandmother (above, left), who was named for a Georgia waterfall, which was named by Cherokee Indians, in whose language the word may mean "terrible." It also turned out that the name is not unique, having been borne for generations by many people.

Author Mackenzie maintains that he was not thinking of Miss Bankhead at all while he worked on "Tallulah the Tube." His first version was "Ruby the Tube," since he felt that he needed matching "oo" sounds. However this was rejected by his bosses because Prell is not the color of a ruby, but green. Thereupon Mackenzie sacrificed his "oos" and switched to "Tessie the Tube." But on the suggestion of a colleague that he could do still better, he cast Tessie aside and worked until he found what he thought was the perfect name. The jingle did not have as many "oo" sounds as the song called I'll Take Tallulah ("No one doing the hula can do what Tallulah can do to me"), from M-G-M's 1941 film Ship Ahoy, but Len Mackenzie thought it was fine, and so did NBC, CBS, Procter & Gamble and Benton & Bowles, until Tallulah lowered the boom.

"TALLULAH THE TUBE" is identified with her in radio listeners' minds according to Miss Bankhead. Above is a caricature constructed with the aid of paper and yarn.

TALLULAH THE HOUND, a registered bitch owned by Ann Duncan of Staatsburg, N.Y., was so named because the Duncans thought its eyes looked like Miss Bankhead's.

TALLULAH THE HOUSEMAID, 64-year-old Tallulah Jackson from White Plains, N.Y., bears the same name as her great-grandmother, an Indian who lived in Georgia.

THE ATLANTIC NATIONS UNITE FOR DEFENSE

Last week, in concert with Canada and six nations of Western Europe, the U.S. published the text of a treaty which represents the greatest formal shift in U.S. policy—and American thinking—since the promulgation in 1823 of the Monroe Doctrine. The North Atlantic treaty binds its signatories, in event of "armed attack against one or more of them," to "assist the party or parties so attacked by taking forthwith, individually and in concert with the other parties, such action as it deems necessary, including the use of armed force, to restore and maintain the security of the North Atlantic area. . . ." By this phrasing the treaty, which is still to be debated and ratified, leaves to the U.S. Congress its sole right to declare war. But, in ratifying it, the Senate accepts in advance the obligation to go to war in event of a major act of aggression. Riotous Italian Communists (below) reflected the intensity of Soviet concern at this new evidence of Western determination. In contrast to 1939 when Hitler could be certain that the U.S. would not immediately oppose him, the leaders of Soviet Russia now confront the certainty that the U.S. must act at once to meet aggression

COMMUNIST REACTION to Atlantic Pact was sharpest in Rome, where Reds provoked riots outside parliament building while their leaders filibustered inside in an effort to prevent Italy from joining in the treaty. Police clubs suppressed riots and Chamber of Deputies finally voted 342-170 to request membership in Atlantic group.

A REFUGEE PERUVIAN LEADER FINDS DANGEROUS SANCTUARY

The man in the window in the picture below is a political refugee in his own country. He is Victor Raul Haya de la Torre, leader of Peru's revolutionary and left-wing (but anti-Communist) Apristas. Driven into hiding last October when middle-road President José Luis Bustamante cracked down on the Apristas, Haya de la Torre found sanctuary in the Colombian embassy on Jan. 3 after a right-wing Army junta ousted Bustamante. Now he seldom appears at a window, for Peru's army dictatorship would like to shoot at Haya—with a gun, not a camera.

The right of sanctuary in foreign embassies and legations is especially sacred in Latin America, and even dictators usually respect it. But the Peruvian junta has so far refused to grant Haya de la Torre safe conduct out of the country, a privilege readily accorded Bustamante, who is now living in Argentina. This violation of tradition, as well as the treaties of Havana and Montevideo, probably will be a major issue on the agenda of the forthcoming conference of the 21 Western Hemisphere nations. Meanwhile Haya de la Torre is writing his memoirs.

PRESIDENT HAS TOUGH WEEK

It was a week of mishaps for Harry Truman. Congress scuttled his civil rights legislation, softened his rent control recommendations and tabled his nomination of Mon Wallgren for chairman of the National Resources Planning Board. Meanwhile, in Key West, Fla., Truman relaxed in gay sports clothes (above) that were a far cry from the formal regalia in his recently released portrait as a Masonic Grand Master (p. 54). But the sports shirt revealed a slight presidential paunch that caused his doctor, Wallace Graham, to complain that Truman was getting too fat (176 lbs.). At the same time Press Secretary Charlie Ross was enraging photographers by trying to censor pictures of the President swimming (below) that were taken from a blimp. At week's end aides were looking for trouble in odd places. Before a press conference Secret Service men removed all the coconuts from the tree under which it was held.

MONTE CARLO TAKES UP "LES CRAPS"

Casino men in U.S. jumble the jargon, finally learn the hard way

For decades the elegant gambling halls of Monaco's Monte Carlo Casino have echoed to little more than the genteel murmur of croupiers and an occasional pistol shot from the gardens. This year, however, some brash new notes can be expected (like "C'mon, seven!") when the Casino management, badly in need of American tourist dollars, opens its first room pour les craps. Recently the Casino sent to the U.S. its games director, Louis Ceresol, and a head croupier, Albert Jauffret, to find out how America's most popular game of chance is played. Although they had no trouble at all picking up the fundamentals, both men had a terrible time with the jargon. They spent long hours at Las Vegas and Reno crap tables carefully tape-recording the staccato chant of the stickmen who control the tables and wondering if it would be worthwhile translating "It's Big Dick!" ("C'est le gros Richard") or "Eight the hard way!"

MONTE CARLO CASINO lost $450,000 in the fiscal year 1947-48.

("Huit difficile") for the benefit of French players. "Enfin," admitted Ceresol, "we give it up. In translation it is not fascinating." They decided to let Monte Carlo speak the strange patois of American stickmen (next page).

French players, Ceresol believes, will embrace the game joyfully because, unlike roulette and baccarat, it gives the player an almost even break (he has a 49.298% chance of winning). But they must struggle with their own equivalents for "Little Joe" ("Petit Joseph"), "Baby needs a new pair of shoes" ("Mon enfant a besoin d'une nouvelle paire de chaussures"). The Casino's hopes, however, are pinned on Americans. It expects to see about 200,000 of them next season, none of whom can be counted on to shoot themselves if they lose. "The French loser," says Ceresol, "is always in great disgust. The American loser smiles and says, 'I have the terrific night.'"

CERESOL PRACTICES the American craps trick of counting chips in stacks by "feel" to speed up payoffs.

STICKMAN'S CHANT, a running commentary on players' throws by the man who runs the game, is practiced by Ceresol whose delivery bears a strong Gallic flavor with overtones of pure Nevada, where he learned the chant, thus: "He ees now coming out—whoops—craps!—he ees coming out and five ees zee nombaire—ha!—craps once more—and a new player—eight ze difficult way—whoops—he has gone away—goev me a small bet—he ees coming out—ha!—you are feencashed—he ees coming out—10 ze difficult way—ees nine and he wishes 10—ha!—zee beeg boy has thrown eet away—alors!—whoops!"

MASON WASHINGTON

Like Mason Harry Truman, Mason George Washington has also been the subject of a recent work of art. A 17-foot statue of Washington wearing a Masonic apron around his waist and the master's emblem around his neck has been made by Sculptor Bryant Baker. Now being cast in bronze, it will stand next year in the George Washington Masonic National Memorial in Alexandria, Va. where Washington once presided as lodge master. Washington never matched Truman in becoming a 33rd Degree Mason, but he joined the order at an earlier age (20). He was also the center of a move to make him the single head of all U.S. Masonic lodges. But the campaign failed. Masonry in America has always been operated by state heads of equal rank.

TWELVE-FOOT REPLICA of chair actually used by Washington will stand behind the statue.

When Mr. Klausen took up painting four years ago, he found that it came as a natural outgrowth of doodling at business meetings. He went at it so enthusiastically that now his wife Emily and their two grown sons all paint too (right). The Klausens are also eager art collectors and have filled their eight-room house with professional works. But their own output is so great that they have set aside one downstairs room (left) and its adjoining lavatory for Klausen creations only.

ARAMCO

AN ARABIAN-AMERICAN PARTNERSHIP DEVELOPS DESERT OIL AND PLACES U.S. INFLUENCE AND POWER IN MIDDLE EAST

PHOTOGRAPHS FOR LIFE BY DAVID DOUGLAS DUNCAN

In May 1933, when the camel grass was fresh on Arabia's desert, the King of Saudi Arabia entered into a contract selling oil rights in a vast area of his kingdom to the Standard Oil Co. of California. An American listed "visible assets" thus gained as "a lot of sand, a lot of heat, a lot of flies and a great deal of faith." Yet this spring, 16 years later, the result of that contract and faith is a spectacular example of American enterprise at work abroad. It is called "Aramco"—the Arabian American Oil Company—and is pictured in the next 15 pages.

Aramco in its larger aspects could be a prototype of the kind of thing President Truman had in mind in his "bold new program" of American guidance for "underdeveloped areas." In its second decade of active operation, Aramco is the biggest Middle East oil producer and one of the largest in the world. It already has altered the daily lives of many of the subjects of a primitive kingdom and projected U.S. interest into an area which was until lately a domain of British power. It involves one of the biggest single investments—$250 million—of private capital abroad and currently earns a huge operating profit which Aramco justifies by pointing to such risks as the vagaries of the times in the Middle East, the proximity of the Russians (850 miles north) and the ceaseless ups and downs of international oil politics (p. 79).

Now owned by four major U.S. oil companies (Standard of California, the Texas Co., Standard of New Jersey, Socony-Vacuum), Aramco has lured some 3,600 Americans to work in Saudi Arabia in five years. Aramco's growth has agitated lesser competitors in U.S. oil, inspired congressional investigations of oil prices and set pundits on guard against "oil diplomacy." Aramco operates in an area holding 42% of the world's known oil reserve. It is therefore at once a strategic resource and concern of the U.S. Only recently, when the U.S. Air Force's Lucky Lady II flew nonstop around the world, her second refueling was over Dhahran, Aramco's headquarters town. The U.S. government is now negotiating to retain limited rights in Dhahran's airfield, which the U.S. Army built in 1946.

Aramco's visible achievements in Saudi Arabia can be a subject of justifiable U.S. pride. In the search for the oil which keeps the 20th Century world moving, its operation has set a stimulating new pace. It has projected the century of technology into and beyond an ancient world.

amco's concession is the largest, and Britain's Anglo-Iranian the area's pioneer—Britain acquired control in 1914.

TRANS-ARABIAN PIPELINE, guarded and inspected by Aramco air and automobile patrols, is a spectacular recent measure of Saudi Arabia's progress. Now 125 miles long, the pipeline ultimately will carry 300,000 barrels of oil a day 1,100 miles from Persian Gulf to Mediterranean. Final cost: more than $200 million.

A FLAT ON THE DESERT Halts Aramco supertruck moving 40-ton load of steel pipe in sections. Saudi heat (40°F to 103°F) overinflates low pressure tires unless they are checked often. Pipe, made in Los Angeles, comes in sections 30 and 31 inches in diameter, 31 feet long. It is welded into 93-foot lengths in Arabia,

DAY SHIFT ENDS AT RAS TANURA REFINERY WHICH DAILY TURNS OUT 135,000 BARRELS OF OIL PRODUCTS

IT IS A BIG, COMPLEX BUSINESS

For Aramco's original rights in Saudi Arabia, King Ibn Saud received $250,000 in gold. For every 42-gallon barrel of Aramco oil, he gets about 22¢ or around $110,000 a day. His cooperation lets Aramco proceed with the development of personnel (opposite), refineries (above) and storage (below). About half of the king's income becomes personal treasure or goes in subsidies to desert tribes. The rest goes into public works, including a railroad which Aramco is building on credit. Aramco failed to convince the rail-minded king that trucks are better and can haul anything (left).

Aramco's own gross daily take surpasses a million dollars a day. Aramco is secretive about its profits, which go to amortize an investment which will total three quarters of a billion, but some oil economists guess profits (before taxes) to be around $625,000 a day. Aramco sells its oil products direct only to the companies which own it. Most of its production is marketed now in Europe, but some goes to the Far East and 100,000 barrels daily to the U.S. Selling Arab oil in the U.S. frightens American independents, who know that ultimately Aramco could swamp them in low-priced oil. But its prices are now as high as any; in fact a Senate committee has said the U.S. Navy was overcharged for Aramco oil after the war. Aramco rides out criticism, secure in the certainty that world demand grows.

OIL FOR WORLD MARKETS is stored at these tanks at Ras Tanura. Those at rear hold 180,000 barrels each, equal to largest anywhere. At pier in distance Aramco loads 80 to 90 tankers monthly, including those of U.S. Navy, which buys more than 20% of Aramco's refined products through a marketing affiliate.

ALLAH'S HOUSE, the big Moslem mosque at Dhahran, stands in settlement of reed barrastis (background) where Arab oil-field workers are housed temporarily.

ARAMCO'S HOUSING program for its Arab employees is replacing barrastis (foreground) with fan-cooled, white concrete dormitories, each holding 22 men.

HIGH PAY, GOOD HOUSING WIN ARAB FRIENDSHIP

Aramco's bosses have tried to avoid the odium of old-style colonialism. They want Arabs to like Americans. The master manner is taboo, respect for Arab customs is required. Aramco hires no Jews for fear of offending Ibn Saud's government and has not built a Christian chapel for Americans because that would offend the Saudi followers of Allah. Dhahran's bleak skyline is dominated by a mosque (above) built by the king for Arab workers out of oil income. Sensitivity to Arab feelings began with the first American geologists in Saudi Arabia in 1933; they wore beards and Arab garb to be quietly inconspicuous in a land which distrusted foreigners. By 1949 many of Aramco's 15,000 Arab workers had discarded flowing bishtis and adopted Western dress (opposite). This sensible process works both ways—many Americans have found that Arab headgear protects them best against the desert sun.

Aramco drills water wells for its Arabs, promotes irrigation projects, gives free medical care (most prevalent ailments: trachoma, skin ulcers, syphilis, malaria), provides new housing (above) and schools. But to its Arabs, Aramco first symbolizes good pay and steady work. Minimum pay is three riyals (90¢) a day, skilled pay about 900 riyals ($270) a month. This means unprecedented fortune, keeps paymasters and local merchants busy on paydays (below). Aramco has even succeeded in tempering harsh Saudi Arabian justice with mercy: it is still Koranic practice to punish a pickpocket by cutting off his right hand; a doctor from Aramco now attends to paint the culprit's forearm with iodine before the chopping, then bandages the stump.

PAYDAY comes twice monthly for Aramco's Arab personnel. They get paid in silver riyals worth 30¢ each, minted at Philadelphia for the Saudi government.

BIG MERCHANT Hamad A. Gosaihi, resting his bare feet on large bags of silver coins, counts the profits from sale of piece goods, clothing and food to Arabs.

EX-CAMEL HERDER is an example of the change Aramco has brought to Arabia. A nomad by birth, he had not seen machinery until Aramco arrived, now he ranks as an expert pipe fitter. His U.S.-made goggles deflect sandy dust. His dungarees are American, imported for sale to Aramco workers by an Arab merchant.

OIL HUNTERS' CARAVAN winds through desert washes 100 miles south of Aramco's headquarters, Dhahran, in search of new oil fields. Their drill rigs punture sand, earth and rock to a depth of 1,500 feet, probing the earth's layers for geological clues to oil pools that may lie far below the surface in deep earth folds.

CARL WASHBURN, drilling foreman from California, has been working in Saudi Arabia since 1939.

BERT DAVIS, welder from Michigan, once worked in Indonesia. He calls this "just another hot job."

ROBERT INMAN, top welder from Los Angeles and veteran of Alaska pipeline work, likes Arabian heat.

SEISMOGRAPHERS MEASURE EARTH STRATA BY VIBRATIONS AS BLAST THROWS SAND FROM TEST HOLE

THE SEARCH FOR OIL GOES ON

Aramco's concession gives it all oil in an area of 440,000 square miles—larger than Texas and California combined. So far Aramco's geologists have found five fields, and a rugged force of U.S. oil workers, some of them shown on the opposite page, have brought in 62 producing oil wells. But Aramco has surveyed only half of its area and will have 50 years before its present concession expires. The search for oil goes on constantly. Mixed American and Arab seismograph crews (above) map earth layers. Other crews move through the desert with earth structure drills (left) to probe subsurface geology. The geologists stay out as long as five months, living in air-conditioned trailers. When they find possible oil strata a drilling crew follows (below). If they strike oil the next step is a spectacular desert blaze (next page).

ELDON TINDALL, a Kansas driller, arrived last September, brought his wife and child in October.

DRILLING FOR OIL at Abqaiq, a tool-wise Arab crew fits new pipe to the drill casing. Normal crew (three Americans, nine Arabs) drills more than 100 feet a day, hits oil at average of 6,800 feet in 60 days.

GAS INFERNO scorches the desert and blackens the sky as Aramco drillers bring in a new well. Abqaiq No. 11. The fire is set by engineers for a practical reason. When the drill strikes oil, natural gas pressure forces up a cascading mixture of gas, mud and water which is led into a "flare line" ending at a safe distance from the oil wellerrick. Then engineers ignite the gas so that it will not poison the surrounding air. After line is clear fire is put out and oil flows.

MORE GAS BURNS near stabilizer plant (foreground) at Alqaia field, where toxic gas is removed before crude oil can be safely shipped. Gases are piped off and set afire (left, center). The process is wasteful but necessary since there is no commercial use for gas in Arabia yet.

AFTER THE BURNING, a portable derrick is towed to a new drill site. Seven of these 40-ton rigs, 135 feet high, do most of Aramco's drilling by keeping on the move. Unlike U.S., where oil fields often look like derrick forests, Arabian landscape is little changed by oil industry.

TWO MEMBERS OF SAUDI ARABIA'S NEW ARAB "MIDDLE CLASS" TALK OVER BUSINESS

ARAMCO EDUCATES ITS LABOR

When Aramco introduced the first wheelbarrow to Saudi Arabia, four puzzled Arab laborers loaded it, hoisted it to their heads and walked away. Now, 15 years later, thousands of Arabs know how to use wheelbarrows and more complex machines. Skilled Arab employees do not often attain top rank, but they drive trucks, work as junior chemists and repair engines.

Beyond the building of skills in its own employees, Aramco proudly believes its business is creating an Arab "middle class" of contractors, distributors and small private businessmen. Its Arab Industrial Development Department concentrates on setting up Arabs in business. Two such entrepreneurs, Ahmed bin Hamad and Abdul Karim bin Mohammed Ali (above), partners in a building firm, are erecting 150 prefabricated houses. Aramco has learned the hard way that Arab workmen on such jobs than an American can. Nearly 400 private Arab contractors, employing 8,000 workers, do business with Aramco. Arab companies operate taxis, maintain railroad equipment and provide routine services from ice-making to haircutting. Aramco has an intelligently selfish purpose: this permits the company to concentrate on producing oil.

Elders in the new middle class are beginning to send their sons to Aramco trade schools, where they will get four years of reading and writing, six of technical instruction. Aramco's educational program has grown to a point where the company soon may have to meet one of the chronic social questions of any venture in internationalism: whether or not to mix Arab and American students when it starts a high school, probably next fall. Language differences make segregation sensible now, but for the long future Aramco, which wants to show enlightenment, has not come to its answer.

FUTURE BLACKSMITHS, two Arabs and an intent black-skinned Sudanese, learn the ironworker's hard art from Harry Johnson (shirtless) at Aramco's Trade School. Such instruction requires patience since many students are illiterate, and verbal teaching is limited by most Americans' small knowledge of Arabic.

LIFE IN ARABIA HAS ITS POINTS

Aramco's Americans call Arabia "Land of Wajid Mafi"—meaning the Land of Plenty of Nothing. Despite all Aramco can do for them, long duty in a primitive country makes for periods of boredom and an occasional feeling that they are living in an exotic vacuum. Like most other colonists they spend their private lives apart from the natives. This is agreeable to both since American and Arab ways of life are as different as desert oil and oasis water.

The American colony includes 1,400 at Dhahran's oil field and company headquarters, 1,000 at Ras Tanura refinery, 900 at Abqaiq oil field and 300 scattered elsewhere. It would be bigger if Aramco did not have a housing shortage. But some 375 families are now among the colonists. New workers once had to wait two years before families could join them; now it is a year or less. Families get air-conditioned houses or apartments, single workers pleasant dormitories. They all find the desert depressing when shamals (dust storms) cover porches with dry silt or when hot winds from the Persian Gulf bring drenching humidity, but they can escape to Europe or Beirut for short leaves if life becomes unbearable. Children thrive on the climate, in which the temperature stays near 50° F. in winter and hits a high 115° in summer. There are swimming, golf, bowling and amateur dramatic clubs to keep the spirits up. Their foreign pay also helps: it is 25% above home rates, and they escape U.S. income tax.

Aramco has 300 single girls who often find both adventure and eligible males in the desert. Of the first five Aramco girls who arrived in 1943, four are still there—three with Aramco husbands. How the Americans live in the desert is shown on this and the following three pages.

BIGWIGS' DINNER for visiting Aramco President W. F. Moore (facing camera) brings executives of familiar canned and packaged foods 8,000 miles from home. Cost-of-living bonuses offset high prices.

tion supervisor's daughter, Linda Lee Kolman, in leading role. This school has 13 pupils in kindergarten and grades. Next fall for the first time Aramco hopes to have a huge school for employees' children

FAMILIAR PUZZLE—which wallpaper to choose—occupies Mrs. Fred Abbott in her Dhahran home.

ARAMCO FAMILY, Fred and Jeanne Abbott and their children, Fred Jr. and Carol, recently moved

AMERICAN PATTERNS reach Aramco by mail, keep dorm girls busy. Irene Bevelhimer (left) fits Billie Dean's new housecoat while Marjorie Ashley knits.

GOLF IN ARABIA is replete with majesty and hazards. Aramco Americans' 18-hole desert course is crossed by subsidiary pipeline which carries crude oil 54 miles from Dammam to Bahrain refinery. Here a red ball gleaming against sand, is wedged trapped between the double pipes. Arabs think all Aramco golfers are mad.

POLITICS HAS A PART IN INTERNATIONAL OIL

JAMES A. MOFFETT

(above), a long-time friend of Franklin D. Roosevelt. In a federal court in New York in February a jury decided that Aramco should pay Moffett $1,150,000 for services which involved using his influence with F.D.R. on Aramco's behalf. Moffett already had outlined his story in Washington for the U.S. Senate's Brewster committee, investigating sale of Aramco oil to the U.S. Navy. The story, as it developed in Washington and New York was this:

In 1940 the King of Saudi Arabia (below) found his revenues badly thinned because Europe's war, nearing the Middle East, had cut off the profitable flow of pilgrims to Mecca. With this trade lost, the king needed $10 million from other sources; he could raise $1 million from Britain. He asked Aramco for $6 million. Aramco already had advanced the king $6.8 million more than he had coming from royalties, but it was afraid to turn him down. Moffett, chairman of two affiliated oil companies, talked it over with Aramco's president. In April 1941 Moffett put Aramco's problem to his friend at the White House.

At F.D.R.'s request Moffett obtained an offer from Aramco: If the U.S. would advance $6 million to the king annually for five years, the Navy could have petroleum products at attractive prices. But the Navy at that time did not feel that it needed Aramco's oil. Another complication also arose. When King Ibn Saud learned of the company's effort, he angrily advised Aramco that he "knew he could borrow money from the U.S. Government if he so wished, and that if he did so wish he would do so directly and . . . not restrict himself to requesting such an inadequate sum." Nevertheless Aramco and Moffett pursued their project.

Harry Hopkins wrote Jesse Jones, "... Some of it might be done under Lend-Lease although just how you could call that outfit [Saudi Arabia] a democracy I don't know. . . ." But temporarily another way was found. The U.S. was lending Britain $425 million, and F.D.R. wrote Jones, "Jesse, will you tell the British I hope they can take care of the king of Saudi Arabia. This is a little far afield from us." An interested Standard Oil executive wrote, "... Perhaps something can be worked out to let the king know, and the British admit, that this is our money." Three years later, when Aramco warned of "increasing British economic influence in Saudi Arabia," the U.S. put Ibn Saud on direct Lend-Lease.

KING IBN SAUD

Moffett later charged that when Aramco finally did sell oil to the Navy, it charged $25 million too much. Aramco replied that it saved the Navy $26,500,000. The Brewster committee found Aramco had overcharged. This argument may never be settled, but Aramco is trying by an appeal to win the case over Moffett's pay. Aramco's attorney told the court during trial, "I have yet to learn that friendship with the President is a saleable commodity," and also argued, "This suit wasn't brought until Franklin Roosevelt's lips were sealed in death, but I wish to God he were alive today to tell this jury how he would have reacted to a suggestion that . . . Jimmy Moffett was telling that he was going to be paid for influencing the conduct of the President. . . ."

Moffett's lawyer summarized the plaintiff's case, "... This is indeed a sad commentary on the morals of big business. . . . They are . . . saying that this man has volunteered to do this job, a story that is absolutely and totally unworthy of belief." The jury's award of $1,150,000 was far less than the $6 million Moffett had asked, but he said, "I feel fine." If the award sticks he can count his long career in the oil business satisfactorily ended. Aramco knows its career is only started.

speaking of LIFE...

TIME & LIFE

Red Pouch—Six nights a week a man with a large red pouch hurries through New York's Grand Central Station heading for the 20th Century Limited. Part of your next week's LIFE is starting on its way to the printers in Chicago. Saturday's pouch carries the Newsfront stories—the last section of LIFE to go to press, and the reason why Saturdays are seldom calm in LIFE's editorial offices. A recent example was the Soviet's Molotov shift, which came over the wires Friday evening. The editors called for pictures—for every shot of Molotov available among the 2,000,000 pictures in LIFE's morgue. On Saturday morning there were 1,600 pictures ready for the editors' choice. The big picture news services were alerted and arrived with additional piles. Late news shots, just in by plane from Berlin, were rushed from LaGuardia Airport. Meanwhile writers and researchers were at work on the text, artists were making layouts for the new five-page story. It was in the Chicago-bound pouch on the Century that night, complete except for two pictures which had to be sent by wirephoto. Five days later, the LIFE issue carrying the story was in millions of mailboxes and on 90,000 newsstands—some of them thousands of miles away.

Merchant from Missouri—A Missouri merchant had a letter from LIFE recently reminding him that one out of five of his customers and potential customers reads LIFE according to the nation-wide average. He misread the figures. Thinking that LIFE had said four out of five, and being strictly from Missouri, he queried the first 300 customers entering his store. "Curiously enough," he wrote, "pretty close to four out of five of our customers do read LIFE after all." LIFE's one-out-of-five figure came from the ninth report of a continuing study of magazine audiences. Through a similar study, a count has recently been made of the number of LIFE-reading families in the U. S. There are 14,950,000 of them, which means that each issue of LIFE is read in 36% of all the households in the country.

Vote of Interest—The leading weekly magazines, as you perhaps know, all showed an increase in circulation between 1940 and 1948. Their combined circulation gain was 4,529,666. LIFE's individual gain was 2,585,605. (Next highest was TIME, with an increase of 890,862.) Thanks.

Reader Detectives—LIFE readers seem to have a definite streak of Sherlock Holmes, even to the occasional use of a magnifying glass to ferret out any minor discrepancy that may have eluded LIFE's careful researchers. "That's no ancient musket, it's a modern shotgun," comes the word from over 1,000 keen-eyed readers. "The buttons on the general's blouse aren't old Army regulation," they write, or "Nathan Hale was a bachelor, so how can you speak of his descendants?" Advertising as well as editorial pages share in this keen-eyed scrutiny. An advertiser who in all innocence described the giant Saguaro cacti around Gallup, New Mexico, was quickly informed there is no such thing. "Porcupines have single young, not a litter as you show in your ad," readers admonish, or "Those pistols in your illustration would not have been in existence in 1763."

LIFE Round Tables—Following the first LIFE Round Table, The Pursuit of Happiness, reported in the July 12, 1948 issue, clubs and community groups began asking for guidance in conducting similar round table discussions. This led to LIFE's booklet, A Guide to Your LIFE Round Table on The Pursuit of Happiness, which gives the general procedure for setting up such discussion groups. It's now available without charge as an aid to clubs planning their next season's programs. Other subjects which have been covered by LIFE Round Tables are Modern Art (Oct. 11, 1948) and Housing (Jan. 31, 1949), and more are now under way. The technique for LIFE Round Tables was developed by Russell Davenport, who acted as moderator. For the complex subject, The Pursuit of Happiness, there were four preliminary discussion groups, each lasting one evening. Their findings were turned over to the "final" Table, a panel of eighteen men and women, whose varied backgrounds assured a well-rounded and informed discussion. They met in a series of sessions which added up to some fifteen solid hours of debate. An interesting extension of The Pursuit of Happiness Round Tables is the current series of student panel discussions at Temple University, Philadelphia. With Russell Davenport as moderator, there will be five sessions at which forty-eight students will have an opportunity to give the point of view of youth on this basic human problem.

THE NEW RICHARD WIDMARK MAKES HIS FIRST APPEARANCE IN A SYMPATHETIC ROLE AS THE FIRST MATE ON A WHALING SHIP IN "DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS"

WIDMARK THE MOVIE VILLAIN GOES STRAIGHT

With the release of a modest little movie epic called Down to the Sea in Ships, the career of Hollywood's ranking dyed-in-the-wool villain reaches a turning point. In this film Richard Widmark goes straight. As a villain he was not the currently fashionable, Burt Lancaster kind of heavy: a basically good man, a little slow, who is led astray by social con litions or evil companions. Like Lon Chaney, Widmark was endowed with an unexplained, unprovoked, wholly natural depravity. He was one of the last of the breed to be just plain bad.

His career of wickedness began in 1947 when Director Henry Hathaway was looking for someone to play the morphinomaniac sadist in Kiss of Death. Widmark, a clean-cut 32-year-old from Sunrise, Minn. who had been a college instructor and leading man in some Broadway and radio plays, came in to apply. "Nothing doing, too intellectual," said Hathaway. But when the actor put on a wig that reached down almost to his eyes and sneered and giggled, the director knew he had what he was after: a peep into a terrifying, subhuman world. Widmark got the part, pushed an old lady in a wheelchair downstairs and became a star overnight. Later he was a girl-beating gangster (right) in The Street With No Name, a backwoods entrepreneur who framed his best friend in Road House, a desperado who tried to murder all his friends in Yellow Sky.

Now all is past and the new Widmark appears (above) fresh, frank and smiling, a red-blooded right-minded American. His next picture, Slattery's Hurricane, offers him another sympathetic role, so it seems as though the screen's prize sadist has gone over permanently to the side of the righteous.

THE OLD WIDMARK at work in The Street With No Name, knocks the daylights out of his girl friend.

"SHIPS" IS AN INSPIRATIONAL WHALING STORY

The movie which introduces the new Widmark, Down to the Sea in Ships, is an inspirational and practically womanless remake of an old (1923) Clara Bow picture. Widmark plays a mate on a whaler caught in a conflict of loyalties between the tyrannical old captain and the captain's sea-struck grandson. The film too often smells more of the Hollywood sound stages than of the sea but has some exciting scenes of danger and heroism (below).

THUNDERING CLIMAX of Down to the Sea in Ships comes when the whaling ship, Pride of Bedford, sailing with a dying captain through foggy waters in the South Atlantic, suddenly finds itself in imminent peril of running against a huge iceberg.

WIDMARK AT THE HELM tries to make the whaler veer away from the menacing shape of the huge iceberg up ahead.

WIDMARK ON A ROPE goes down into the icy water to try and patch the great hole torn by the berg in the vessel's side.

RETOUCHED DUCHESS

Goya's painting of his mistress gets new look

One of the favorite models of the Spanish painter Goya was the beautiful Duchess of Alba, who for 15 years was his mistress as well. Recently experts of the Ringling Museum in Sarasota, Fla., suspected that their portrait of the duchess had been tampered with by an unknown later painter attempting to make her looks conform to the fashion of his own time. Sure enough, when the painting was cleaned, the lady had lost a few pounds, a few years and a feathered turban.

AFTER CLEANING the sly-eyed Spanish duchess boasts new, gold-buckled belt, a tiny waist and a bountiful head of raven hair.

Change now to Shell X-100

It fights Acid Action of "On and Off" driving!

Major cause of engine wear

You may have thought it's friction that causes the most engine wear. Now it is known that this is not so!

It's Acid Action—chemical etching of engine parts that takes place in the low operating temperatures of today's "On and Off" driving!

In your short trips about town, to the bank, the school, the station—your engine is intermittently "On and Off" . . . runs for brief periods of time only. Hence it seldom warms up to efficient operating temperatures. It runs "cold." In these short "On" periods, combustion may be incomplete and partially burned fuel gases and moisture attack the smoothly polished metal surfaces chemically. It's this biting Acid Action that accounts for up to 90% of your engine's wear!

Shell Research worked all out on this problem... developed a unique "X" safety factor to combat Acid Action. Now, 2½ million miles of road testing—and millions of miles of use by motorists—have proved conclusively that with this "X" safety factor Acid Action is effectively counteracted—engine life is prolonged.

This triumph of Shell Research—another Shell

"first"—comes to you only in Shell X-100 Motor Oil. This oil, long famous for its ability to protect your engine under the stresses of sustained high speeds and extreme driving conditions, now has this added protection for every mile you drive. It is unequalled by any other motor oil, no matter its price.

Let your Shell Dealer drain, flush and refill your crankcase with Shell X-100 Motor Oil today.

HOW REGISTER OPENS is shown in demonstration. Register, mounted on Plexiglas duct, is set at 70°. Room temperature, marked on card, is 70° (picture No. 1).

In this case only a small amount of warm air (mixed with smoke for visibility) is let in. As room temperature falls (Nos. 2 and 3) the register opens to admit more air.

HEAT METER

New register for home heating systems guarantees an even temperature for every room in the house

The forced warm-air heating system with its familiar ducts is the most popular in U.S. homes. It is cheap, rarely breaks down. But it has one fault: it often heats some rooms too much, others too little. This winter a new register solving this problem became available. Made by the Dole Valve Company of Chicago, it provides each room with its own thermostatic control. The new register (price: $25) has a dial which can be set for any temperature from 60° to 80°. Once set the register keeps a room at this temperature by automatically opening and closing to admit or block the warm air from the furnace. Thus unneeded warm air, blocked at easy-to-heat rooms, pours into hard-to-heat rooms, warming them quickly—a process which makers claim can reduce fuel bills by 20%.

powerful thermostatic unit. In pictures with grille off (Nos. 2 and 3) man blows into hub, warming unit with his breath. The unit expands under heat and closes register.

PERCHED ON AN UNLIKELY HOBBY HORSE IN SANTA ROSA MOUNTAINS, JOY LANSING RELAXES FROM HER WORK OF PLAYING DUMB BLONDE FOR TELEVISION FILMS

TELEVISION FILM QUICKIES

Movie shorts are ground out fast and cheap to supplement live programs

While Hollywood movie-makers are still hotly arguing about what television is threatening to do to their neighborhoods, a whole new crop of movie producers has sprung up to turn the threat to their advantage. They are the makers of "quickie" television films whose ranks have recently been joined by oldtime movie-maker Hal Roach (Our Gang comedies). Adapting movie techniques to the special requirements of television, Roach has already turned out six shorts, most of which, like his old movies, are full of pie-throwing, mischievous small try and pretty girls. By all odds the prettiest is Joy Lansing (above and cover), whom Roach hopefully thinks of as a sort of latter-day combination of Thelma Todd and Jean Harlow.

Most successful television film-maker so far is a tenant of Roach's film studio called Grant-Realm Television Productions, which causes popped eyes in Hollywood by grinding out a complete 26-minute story every two days for $8,500. One of them won television's equivalent of an Oscar—the first Emmy. To see how Realm does it, turn the page.

A LOW-COMEDY SCENE is played by Joy Lansing (left) Louis Hall in a Roach short called Sadie and Saly.

SHOOTING SCHEDULES ARE TIGHT, TRICKY AND HARD ON EVERYBODY

A graphic sample of Grant-Realm's headlong production speed and shoestring economy is shown here. In four days (Feb. 21-24) the company finished up one short based on a vintage short story classic, like most of the firm's films, shot the whole of another and got well into a third. Only one sound stage equipped with five key sets was used. To save time the camera hopped from one set to another, shooting a scene involving only one or two actors and then quickly shooting another with the rest of the cast on a second set while the first group of actors hastily made costume changes. This is rather hard on the cast, crew and directors and makes it almost impossible to shoot scenes in story continuity. But because everybody on the lot foresees a bright future for television films even the stars are willing to work for as little as $55 a day.

NEW FILM STARTS right off the second day with Birthday of the Infanta, a story about a dwarf's tragic love for a princess using old Juan of Arc sets.

THIRD DAY'S SHOOTING begins with much-used type of television shot: three-quarter-figure close-up which gives perspective without losing detail.

"INFANTA" IS FINISHED after regular hours with a silent scene which requires no overtime for a sound crew. Scene is actually movie's opening one.

① COMPANY FINISHES film based on Mark Twain's Milton Pound Bank-note on Feb. 21. Slate held before camera shows date and time of each take.

③ END OF SECOND DAY'S SHOOTING finds Infanta half completed. TV directors rarely go in for long shots, confine action to small groups like this.

⑤ WOODSY SCENES like this, made during the third day's shooting, are infrequent in television films because foliage is apt to blur badly on TV screens.

⑦ WEEK'S THIRD FILM begins next day—The Bishop's Experiment with an entirely new cast. This short, like the others, was completed in two days.

JACKPOT!

GOLDEN RAIN OF MOTORCYCLES, GREAT DANES AND ERMINE FALLS ON WEST PHILADELPHIA

THIS RADIO AND THIS TELEPHONE BROUGHT MRS. JULIA HUBERT $35,250

REPPEAT that please," said the master of ceremonies, Bert Parks. The millions of Americans who listen to Stop the Music! on Sunday nights all held their breath. "The Navy and the Army, the Army and the Navy," he cried. "That is the Mystery Melody!" The answer won the biggest jackpot in the history of give-away shows. Its value totaled, he said, $35,250. "Isn't it wonderful?" he asked Mrs. Hubert.

Mrs. Hubert—Julia Hubert—was the winner. She is a quiet, dignified, middle-aged housewife who lives in a clean, pleasant little home in the crowded Negro section of West Philadelphia. Her husband, who is 75, is a retired letter carrier and Navy yard worker. The prizes, which included two pedigreed great Danes, two motorcycles and a scholarship to a girls' school in the Berkshires, had evidently been chosen with a more youthful family in mind.

But Mrs. Hubert's triumph was peculiarly appropriate because she is a true child of the radio age. For months and months she hasn't gone to the movies—she has been listening to all the give-away programs. But Stop the Music! is the favorite. On Sunday nights if dinner is late the dishes just stay in the sink unwashed.

On this particular Sunday, dinner was early and everything was spic and span. Mrs. Hubert and her friends Mr. and Mrs. Pennington, who are more or less part of the family, gathered around the tiny portable radio. Notably apart from this group was Mrs. Hubert's husband Ben, who sat in the living room reading the funnies. Mr. Hubert is old and set in his ways. He thinks radio is a lot of nonsense.

The phone rang at 8:03. "Is this Allegheny 4-0286? Is Mrs. Frances Grooms there?" Mrs. Grooms, an old friend of Mrs. Hubert's, used to live in the Huberts' house and Mrs. Hubert never bothered to have the name changed in the listing when she took over the number. If the call had come a few hours earlier, Mrs. Grooms might have answered herself, for she was visiting the Huberts. But she had left with the words, "I got to hurry, I don't want to miss Stop the Music! tonight." By the laws of the contest Mrs. Hubert became the rightful recipient of the call. ("That's fate," says Mrs. Hubert.)

"I am calling for Stop the Music!" said the operator. "Are you listening to the program?" Certainly. She never missed a one. "Well," said the operator, "you're on this evening's list."

The little radio became a fountain of suspense. Mrs. Hubert was sure she would win if she got the chance. She had read the name of the Mystery Melody in a newspaper and had written it down on a piece of paper and nailed it carefully to the wall just over the radio, so she would be sure to have the words right if the call ever came. But she was scared about the preliminary tune, the one which has to be identified before the Mystery Melody is played. Suppose it was one of these new popular songs. Quick, someone was sent across the street to the Jackmans to get their daughter, who knows every song just as quick as it comes out. She wasn't home, so her brother Jimmy, a boy of 20, had to do.

On went the program. Stop the music! It was a man in Lawrenceburg, Tenn. He couldn't guess the preliminary tune (Zip-a-dee Doo-Dah). More songs. Stop the music! It was a man in Rexburg, Idaho. He recognized the preliminary tune, Frankie and Johnny, but he got the title of the Mystery Melody wrong. More songs. More failures.

Then came a man from Detroit. He knew the preliminary tune, but he just missed the Mystery Melody. "You're so close," said Bert Parks,

JACKPOT CONTINUED

"you're so close I can't repeat what you just said." (All the man from Detroit got for his pains was an automatic clothes dryer.)

Then a pause for sponsor identification. Another tune. Then another. Mrs. Hubert waited tense in her chair. Rachel Pennington was tense in hers. What was Mr. Pennington doing? He was walking around, holding his heart. What was Mr. Hubert doing? "He went on sitting in that chair, in the other room, just as unconcerned. He just kept on reading."

Then the phone rang. "Oh my hand was trembling."

"Hello, Mrs. Hubert. Hello, how are you, Mrs. Hubert?"

Fortunately the preliminary tune presented no problem. They had played it on Mrs. Hubert's wedding day.

"The Wedding March," she said. That was right.

"And now here comes the Mystery Melody."

Breathless, one trembling hand clutching the paper with the title written on it and Rachel Pennington standing ready to whisper into her ear to prompt her, she brought forth the fateful words. The next minutes were lost in joyful confusion. "No sir, there's never been anything like that before in my life. And I wouldn't want it to happen again."

The telephone wasn't back on the receiver, the last whoops of congratulations from Parks were still ringing in her ears when the house was invaded by a shouting, back-slapping mob of radio listeners who had rushed out of their houses as soon as they heard the address of the winner. "We had no time to screech and holler," says Mrs. Hubert. "The house filled up so fast I never got up out of my chair, not till

1, 2 o'clock in the morning. It was the biggest thing ever happened on North 59th Street since the transport strike in 1945," when the Army had moved soldiers in to take over the car barn down the block.

Days later old friends and stray acquaintances were still coming up to her door at all hours of the day, to congratulate her. She told them all, "I'm just the same old shoe I always was. I couldn't change."

But to thousands of Americans Mrs. Hubert's stroke of luck seemed to sound a decisive change in their own fortunes. Every mail delivery there is a batch of letters, hundreds and hundreds of them. They all begin with: "Congratulations!" Some of them are from friends or friendly strangers and stop there. One woman wrote she was so excited that when her husband called her upstairs to pour Epsom salts in his bath, she poured in a jar full of raisins instead. But most of the letters are from people who want to share in the loot.

The serious offers go off to a lawyer for consideration. The others pile up in the Hubert house. They are a long catalog of human misery, the more terrible because you can't tell which are genuine and which are sent by professional beggars. "All my life I have suffered from spastic paralysis . . . no words can tell my torments. . . . I love music, it is the voice of God, and if you could let me have your piano. . . ." "With $600 I could get out of jail and rejoin my beloved daughter." Some are written with a bland insolence. "I know you won't have any use for those two motorcycles, so think of me."

Unlike many other jackpot winners, Mrs. Hubert has kept her head and doesn't have any illusions. She has a big downtown lawyer looking after her interests. She will keep the Kaiser sedan. The $1,000 bond, the $1,500 for taxes on the Hubert home, the $1,500 woman's wardrobe and the $1,500 man's wardrobe will come in handy. So will the $1,000 worth of groceries, the new kitchen, the new paint job for the house, the living-room set, the fishing outfits, and the year's supply of shaving lotion, roses, candy and haircuts. On the other hand she intends to sell the piano, the necklace, the two motorcycles, the set of silver, the fireplace sets, the great Dane puppies and $500 cowboy boots (a local high-school principal will give the girls' school scholarship away). She is undecided about the $3,000 ring, the $2,500 watch, the record library ("I guess the kids will get most of it"), the ermine muff and hat once worn by Teresa Wright. She will keep the television set because that's one thing her husband likes. She doesn't. She likes radio better because it doesn't interfere with her crochet work.

Ever worry about how much coffee you drink?

CHANCES ARE, if you're like most of us, you do worry occasionally about drinking too much coffee.

You worry because you know from your own experiences—or perhaps those of your friends—how the caffeine in coffee can have a bad effect on some people.

How often it can make you tense and jittery—and even wakeful at night.

So it is natural—whenever you feel irritable or nervous, or if you've spent a sleepless night—that you mentally begin ticking off the number of cups of coffee you drank.

You wonder if you've been over-doing it lately. If you should begin to limit yourself to a certain number of cups. Or maybe cut out drinking coffee altogether.

Luckily for you, there is a much pleasanter answer to your problem.

DRINK SANKA COFFEE

It's Sanka Coffee. For when you drink Sanka, you can enjoy real coffee—grand-tasting coffee—yet stop worrying about how much you drink.

If you love a good cup of coffee—you'll love Sanka. For Sanka is rich and full-bodied. It has all the aroma, the bracing cheer, the flavor that only real coffee gives you.

REAL COFFEE—97% CAFFEIN-FREE

And, best of all, Sanka is caffeine-free. And that means worry-free! With Sanka you can go ahead and have that second cup, or third cup . . . or sixth cup. Any time—morning, noon or night. And you can't possibly suffer from caffeine effect.

For 97% of the caffeine has been removed. Sanka can't make you feel nervous or "put out." Can't keep you awake.

So why not start drinking Sanka Coffee tomorrow. You have nothing to lose and possibly a great deal to gain.

WHILE BRAVES' VETERANS RELAX OUTSIDE, SOUTHWORTH QUIETLY BUTTONHOLES A ROOKIE IN HOTEL LOBBY

SPRING TRAINING

The Boston Braves have a congenial camp

On March 1 some 800 young men of assorted sizes, ages, talents and ambitions gathered in the warmer areas of Florida, Arizona and California to try to get their names on the roster of 400 major league baseball players. Superficially each of the 16 National and American League training camps looked about the same; sliding pits and pepper games could be found in any of them. But off the field, in clubhouses and hotel lobbies, each had its own distinct personality because the players were bossed by 16 managers of varying abilities and temperaments.

Those players who found themselves at Bradenton, Fla. working for the Boston Braves' William Henry Southworth (opposite) were perhaps luckiest of all. Billy Southworth is a manager who commands respect from his players because he is willing to give friendship in return. Unlike Leo Durocher of the New York Giants ("Nice guys finish last"),

Southworth rarely raises his voice in anger. Unlike Joe McCarthy, whose cold brilliance wins the respect, but not the personal affection, of the Boston Red Sox, Southworth thinks part of his job is to be an off-the-field nursemaid, even if it only means getting two opening day tickets for somebody's aunt from Peoria. Said one member of the Braves, "What a guy! Nobody ever treated me like this before!"

Southworth learned diplomacy the hard way; as "Billy the Kid" he failed 20 years ago in his first attempt as manager because he tried to be a martinet. Now "The Kid" is 57 years old and wiser. Last year he parlayed the Braves into the National League pennant with men who had performed like humpty dumpties for other managers, which makes Boston the team to beat this season. That does not disturb Southworth, who says with calm confidence, "Give me a happy ball club and I'm a hard man to stop."

SLIDING PIT, a bed of tanbark, gets required daily attention from Sibby Sisti (above), who makes a hook slide.

PITCHING MOUND he built in order to work out all alone is used by Johnny Sain, who won 24 games last year.

ANTONELLI'S ROOMMATE, Coach Bob Keely, goes over the National League matters he will face this season

Because Antonelli is a bonus player, Braves have to keep him and cannot arm him out for a major league experience

WIVES AND ROOKIES GET STAR TREATMENT

Eighteen-year-old Johnny Antonelli (above) is just beginning to experience the Southworth treatment. Antonelli's high-school pitching at Rochester, N.Y., (three no-hit games) won him a $50,000 bonus when he signed with Boston. When they met for the first time Southworth discerned that Johnny was a frightened kid. He said simply, "I'm going to room you with Bob Keely." Keely is the Braves' bullpen catcher, a nondrinker and nonsmoker whose job it is to make Johnny a major league pitcher.

Players who are married also have reason to appreciate Southworth. He not only invites the wives

ROOKIE OF THE YEAR in 1948, Alvin Dark walks off field with 14-month-old daughter after intrasquad game.

SUNBATHING Braves sprawl on outfield grass during noon hour. In swimming shorts (right) is Tommy Holmes, the team's leading hitter. Players worked out twice daily, lunched at clubhouse on sandwiches and chocolate milk.

to the camp, but he makes every effort to see that they are made happy. Mrs. Southworth, who is 19 years younger than her husband, is a big help to him with this program. He gives the car keys to her and tells her to take the players' wives to the beach (be-lon), to the golf course or wherever they want to go.

BEACH PARTY is superintended by Mrs. Southworth (center, rear). In the foreground is Eddie Stanky's wife an off-season living singing in Boston nightclubs, has an appreciative audience in Outfielder Marv Rickert (left).

IN OFFICE Southworth talks with Pete Reiser, whose bat could virtually make certain another Boston pennant.

ON FIELD he jokes with General Manager John Quinn, who had the job of signing Braves' half-dozen holdouts.

OVER COFFEE he asks Jim Russell about bad heart that disabled him last year. Russell has fully recovered.

SORE SHOULDER, a common ailment in training, is rubbed by Robert Elliott, whom fans call "Mr. Team."

WHIRLPOOL soothes players' muscles and also helps overweight pitchers like Bill Voiselle (above) to reduce.

SORE SHOULDER of Ray Sanders, who is battling for the first base position, is massaged by Pitcher Beazley.

LUNCH IN CLUBHOUSE (where players wanted it) is eaten by Voiselle (left) and Rookie Pitcher Bob Hall.

BLISTERS leave open sores on the heels of Outfielder Don Thompson, forcing him to miss two days of training.

GET-WELL PETITION is signed for General Manager Quinn's son Jackie, who is ill with rheumatic fever.

PLAYERS' PROBLEMS ARE BOTH PHYSICAL AND PSYCHOLOGICAL

To keep players physically fit the Braves have a full-time physician and all the therapeutic gadgets from whirlpool baths (above, center) to diathermy machines. But Southworth himself prefers to handle those problems which are psychological rather than physical. Not long ago the marriage of one Boston player seemed on the rocks. Southworth asked if he could help. "She just might listen to you," the player replied. Southworth immediately put in a transcontinental telephone call, and within 48 hours the player and his wife were back together.

When a player is trying too hard, as in the case of Pete Reiser (top, left), or is temporarily depressed, as in the case of Rookie Chet Nichols (opposite), a man-to-man dig in the ribs usually will bring him out of it. Such subtleties explain what Southworth means when he says, "I try to treat men as I always wanted to be treated as a player—and never was."

Intercollegiate Bull Session

The successor to the college youth of the flaming '20s and radical '30s is a sensible young man with ideas of his own on psychoanalysis, sex, religion, Karl Marx, jobs, America and the future of the human race

by JOHN MCPARTLAND

THIS spring 400,000 college graduates from 1,728 U.S. schools will pack away their books and set out to find their places in life. This is a special college generation: still made up largely of veterans, emerging into a world full of portents of a new war. What are their plans—what are they thinking—how are they different from their predecessors? To find out, LIFE sent Writer John McPartland on a tour of college campuses. His report is, in a sense, a composite cross-country bull session, a sampling of those little informal gatherings where college men for centuries past have exchanged ideas on women, jobs, religion, sex, next year's football prospects and other matters of concern.

THE college men of this last year of the decade of the '40s are—in the annual well-chosen words of a thousand stiffly perspiring valedictorians—standing at several thresholds. "D'ya know what it reminds me of?" said the lean redheaded boy at U.C.L.A. "An Air Force ready room—six years ago, when we still didn't know what to expect and you didn't talk much because nobody knew any facts. You just waited and some guys kidded around and some guys tried to pretend nothing much could happen—but everybody was really hanging on that loud speaker."

"They are a different breed," said a middle-aged history instructor at an Ivy League university. "They're polite enough, and sometimes they stammer a little the way young men are supposed to, but they all have this mockery behind their eyes when they listen to me, especially when I'm making a positive statement. When I ask a question—it has to be an open question whose possible answers have intrinsic values—the mockery goes away and they're interested."

"They've seen their textbooks become obsolete in midterm, and they find the accumulated opinions of the past shallow. Regardless of what Chancellor Hutchins thinks, these boys have buried Aristotle and Thomas Aquinas. They have a sense of the urgency of tomorrow and a complete respect for competence—that's their measure of each other and of us."

"Probably it's the GIs that have made the difference—but I think even after they've gone we're going to have to admit that universities are in a new situation with respect to their students. We're going to have to know a great lot more about our students than we've ever bothered to find out before, and

WHAT THEY SAY

"The important thing is the organization, the individual is nowhere without it. Who wants to be nowhere? So you figure out how to fit in."

"Everybody ought to be examined by psychiatrists. I wonder how many big names could get a clean bill. . .?"

"Maybe there's less hysteria about sex than there used to be. If you don't take it too seriously everything's all right. Put this down—the girls are getting smarter all the time."

"All any church can do is give you something besides an animal reason for living in a world where just about everything else is trying to kill you by one means or another."

we've got to measure what we give them on a basis of its value for their urgent tomorrow."

Since the time when instructors at Yale wore silver buckles on their shoes and ribbons in their hair the superficial prime interest of college seniors has been in a good job after graduation. The seniors today have somewhat different ideas on that subject—"If you can think of anything better for me than a good start in a big corporation I'll go for it, but I don't believe there's anything better," is the way a Yale senior put it, but the words don't differ much from the Harvard Yard to Berkeley. These are not the men of '29, out after the big money, hoping to be millionaires before '30, nor the pipe-smokers of '39 with their applications in at a Washington bureau. Those years ended decades and phases of American history as well: '49 is a long way from them in time and space.

"We're shooting to be tagged by G.E. or GM or some outfit like that before we graduate," said the wide-chested young fellow in the checkered shirt at Ohio State. "That's why you've got to figure all your plays from the time you're a sophomore—the right courses with grades that are good but not too good, lower part of the top third is about beat, plenty of campus activities to show leadership and getting along with people, and some athletics so that the personnel jokers from the big companies who look over the records will know that you're no swish. You've got to be well-balanced and well-rounded—that's how you get the letter on the high-grade bond paper which says, 'Report to the executive offices on the first of September 1949.' That's what almost all of us are after."

"It's just got to be, for us GIs," said the 26-year-old Minnesotan with the deeply lined face in front of his Quonset bungalow across from Chapman College of Los Angeles. "When I'm studying at night I keep thinking I'm working by the light of a candle and that candle is marked off in years of my life. I can't spend five years working up from the bottom—I've got a wife and a kid."

"They're all trade schools now," commented the Yale history instructor over a table at Mory's. "A university was a place once where young men became literate gentlemen with an appreciation of the humanities. At least that's what they tell me—it was before my time. When I was going to school the slogan was, 'It isn't what you learn that counts—it's who you meet.' But now all the universities are becoming high-powered trade schools."

"About a third of the men are in the CORNELL'S CAMPUS in rolling hills of upper New York above Cayuga's gleaming waters is kind which makes old grads wax sentimental and nostalgic.

"That guy's fire-ball is almost too good since he started eating Wheaties."

Sometimes, Wheaties eaters don't know their own strength. But it comes in handy! For example, Gene Bearden's red-hot pitching high-lighted '48 World Series. Over 10 years a Wheaties eater! Famous training dish with milk and fruit...second helping good too. Wheaties, "Breakfast of Champions"!

technical courses—"How To Create Artificial Life," "How To Blow Up a Medium-sized Planet," "How To Build a Spaceship"—and those are no jokes, sir. The other two thirds are specialists in one general course, "How To Raise Dividends in a Supergigantic Corporation." Sometimes I wonder about a student body composed of mad scientists and incipient Charles Luckmans."

"Sure, the universities are becoming West Points for big business," agreed the editor of a campus daily. "Seniors want to graduate directly into jobs as second lieutenants with U.S. Steel or Du Pont or some such and retire on a colonel's pension 30 years later. What other plans can they make that will give them that much prestige and security? And that's what these boys want."

"Look at college football today—it's a scale model of the situation." We were drinking beer on the terrace in front of Union on the campus of the University of Wisconsin and the boy talking was from Milwaukee, the son of a workman at the A. O. Smith plant.

"Nowadays a football game is a contest between two big organizations. The players are all specialists. They're the raw material and they're obtained by a kind of purchasing department. Then the production department—the coaching staff—works over the raw material and turns out the product, the team. The value of the product is measured by games won and cash customers at the stadium. The public relations staff—the advertising department—dresses up the product in bright packages of publicity and spectacular stuff. That's college football today and it's a fair sample of the situation in making a living."

"The important thing is the organization, the individual is nowhere without it. Who wants to be nowhere? So you figure out how to fit in."

At the Men's Bar of the Parker House a Harvard student, a law senior from Connecticut, took another tack on this idea. "A man going to college has to try and estimate the kind of world he's going to make his living in. I'd be a damn fool to plan to work in a period like 1925 or 1935. The federal government is going to dominate my professional career whether I want it to or not. No matter what field of law I might choose—including the criminal—I'll be involved with career specialists in the government. I'll be involved with the technological management which will be the increasingly important function of those career specialists, and my prosperity will be dominated by that federal reservoir of credit."

"Do you plan to work for the government?"

"Dollar for dollar being the same I'd prefer a government job. I'm taking some technical courses now, and I may try for a D.Sc. in the next few years. Probably I'll get into the field of technological law—it's going to be a big one."

"Just what is the difference between this omnipotent federal government you've been predicting and socialism?"

"That's a difficult definition. It probably depends upon the quality of the men in the government. My own definition of the difference is that a socialist state is mainly concerned with protecting the weak, regardless of its expressed intention, and a free enterprise state is concerned with rewarding the competent. I want to live in a nation devoted to free enterprise regardless of the functions or power of the central government. That's what my generation has to work out."

NEW 1949 ANNUAL CONTEST OF THE DISABLED AMERICAN VETERANS SERVICE FOUNDATION

$100,000

IN CASH PRIZES! YOU MAY WIN $50,000

Here's a brand new contest of fun and skill brought to you by the Disabled American Veterans Service Foundation! $100,000.00 in cash prizes must be won—yes, twice as much as was recently paid out in the 1948 Annual DAV Service Foundation Puzzle Contest. Of this huge sum as many as three prizes, as much as FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS may be yours—in return for a good deed and your skill in puzzle solving. Act fast and you may also win a new 1949 Chevrolet Convertible, as explained below.

YOU MAY ALSO WIN A 1949 CHEVROLET IF YOU HURRY AND ENTER NOW!

Here's How You May Win a CHEVROLET If You Act Fast!

To become eligible for this extra award, your original entry must be postmarked before midnight, April 10, 1949. Your best solution (original or substitute) will then be judged in competition with those submitted by all other contestants who meet this deadline and who have not been awarded an automobile as an extra prize. If it ranks highest (in case of tie, official contest rules apply) you will win a brand new 1949 Chevrolet. So enter now. *But your substitute solution can be submitted as late as June 29, 1949, and still qualify for judging for this extra award.

Help Us To Help America's Disabled Veterans

Incorporated by special Act of Congress, the DAV needs funds to help rehabilitate America's 2,500,000 disabled war veterans—to help them to obtain needed claim evidence, service connections, medical care, hospitalization, vocational training, and suitable employment... yes, even to solve personal problems.

It is for these services that the Foundation again solicits your support. Your contribution is needed and you will be happy to know that every penny of the net proceeds of this contest (after paying for prizes, advertising and all other necessary expenses) will be used by the Foundation and by the DAV to continue its work.

Enter Contest Now!

So act now. Read the Entry Form and read the rules. Then try solving the Official Puzzle. Note that you may send in a higher score free of charge later on if you find you can improve on the solution you now send in. So don't delay—the important thing is to get into the contest right away and put in your bid for your share of the prizes. (See special prize for fast action above.)

THE OFFICIAL RULES

1. $100,000 will be awarded in accordance with the instructions, official prize list and these rules to the contestants who achieve the highest scores in solving the Official Contest Puzzle. This sum will be awarded in three prize groups: Group No. 1 with a first prize of $5,000.00; Group No. 2 with a first prize of $15,000.00; Group No. 3 with a first prize of $30,000.00. Each group has an additional list of 109 prizes each, making a total of 330 prizes in all. (See official list of prizes.)

2. To enter Group 1 a contestant must send in with his answer to the puzzle a donation of $2.00 to the Disabled American Veterans Service Foundation; to enter Group 2 a donation of $5.00 is required and to enter Group 3 a donation of $10.00 must be sent in. A contestant may compete in any one, two or all three prize groups and once having entered may transfer his entry from any group or groups to any other group or groups by submitting the necessary additional donation any time prior to final judging.

3. Each prize group will be judged separately. The contestant who submits the highest valid score in Group 1 will be entitled to first prize in Group 1. Second prize in Group 1 will be awarded to the contestant with the second highest score submitted in that list and so on until the 110 prizes in Group 1 have been awarded. Prizes in Groups 2 and 3 will be awarded similarly.

4. In the event of tie in any group (which seems likely, since this is a large national contest), as many prizes will be reserved in that group as there are tied contestants, before any prizes are awarded for lower scores. To break such ties these tied contestants will be required to send in solutions to a set of five tie-breaking puzzles. The solutions to puzzle No. 1 in this tie-breaking set will be judged first and then the tied-for prizes will be awarded in the order of the valid scores submitted. If this is not sufficient to break all ties and permit awarding of all the tied-for prizes, then the solutions to puzzle

No. 2 submitted by the remaining tied contestants will be judged. If tie still remains, the solutions of the still tied contestants to puzzle No. 3 will then be judged and so on, if necessary, to puzzle No. 5. This may mean that puzzle No. 2 to 5 may not have to be judged. (It is worth noting that in the last DAV Service Foundation Contest top prize of $33,000 was awarded as the result of judging only puzzle No. 1 in the first tie-breaking set.) However, if further needed to break ties a second, third or even a fourth set (each of 5 such tie-breaking puzzles) to be judged similarly may be used. All tie-breaking puzzles will be similar to the original puzzle with clearly identifiable objects, though the objects may be more difficult and more numerous. Partial credit may be given for partial solutions. Tie-breaker puzzles will be judged on the same basis as the original puzzle. The time limit for solving and mailing back the first set of tie-breaking puzzles (if needed) will be not less than 14 days from the date of mailing to tied contestants, and therefore all tie-breaker puzzles will be mailed on the same day; for the second set of tie-breaking puzzles (if needed) not less than 7 days; and for the third and fourth sets (if needed) not less than 3 days each. Tied contestants will not be required to make any additional contributions. Should final ties remain after the fourth set of tie-breaking puzzles, each tied contestant will receive the full amount of the prize for which he or she is still tied.

5. The contest is open to any resident of the Continental United States except employees of the DAV and its subsidiary units, the DAV Service Foundation, its advertising agency, its service organization, or members of their families. Also excluded is anyone who has won $500.00 or more in cash or kind awarded in any other contest prior to entering this contest, or any member of his or her family. Every possible precaution will be taken to enforce this provision. Only one member of an immediate family living at the same address may compete. All entries must bear a permanent home address in the Continental United States to which all contest mail will be sent. Where a contestant changes such permanent home address, the DAV Service Foundation should be notified immediately, but the Foundation can, in no case, assume responsibility for delivery of mail. In view of the uncertain address of members of the Armed Forces on active duty, and the consequent delay in mail delivery, this contest of necessity is not open to them.

6. Each contestant will receive an acknowledgment and an entry number upon receipt of his or her solution to the Official Puzzle, which solution must be submitted on an Official Entry Form and must be accompanied by a contribution of $2.00 or more. At no extra cost, one substitute solution can be submitted on the Official Substitute Solution Form which will be sent to each contestant and which will carry the entry number registered in the contestant's name. In working out and submitting puzzle solutions, contestants must follow the instructions accompanying the puzzle. Neatness does not count, but illegible or illegible entries, or entries too unclear as to be confusing, will not be considered, and donations accompanying such entries will be returned upon request after judging is completed. Where more than one entry is submitted by an individual his or her highest valid score will be considered only in that group or groups in which that score is entered. That score will serve to compete in any one, two or all three prize groups, depending on the amount donated with that particular entry. An individual may win one prize in each prize group.

7. In solving the puzzle, practically any word that fits may be used. A contestant will not receive more points than that claimed nor more than that earned. Therefore, please use care in totaling your score. Remember not to use any hyphenated word or form, prefix, suffix or combining form, abbreviation or contraction. The final word source authority for this contest will be the Merriam-Webster New International Dictionary, Unabridged, Second Edition, 1948 printing and with the exceptions noted) any word may be used provided it actually appears in bold-face type anywhere on any page within the A-Z main alphabetical section of the above dictionary. No plural or other inflectional form is acceptable unless it appears in bold-face type. No word that appears only as part of a two or more word phrase or expression (such as "any" in "chop away") is admissible.

8. The DAV Service Foundation will not enter into any individual correspondence concerning the eligibility of any word for use in solving the puzzle. Each contestant however may be required, upon request, to furnish the source of any word used.

9. All entries must be sent by mail to: DAV SERVICE FOUNDATION $100,000.00 Puzzle Contest Washington 6, D. C. and must be postmarked before midnight, April 30, 1949, and received before 8:00 P. M., May 15, 1949, to be eligible for consideration. The deadline dates for mailing and receipt of substitute solutions are 60 days after these respective dates. The failure of any contestant after request by the DAV Service Foundation, properly to identify the source of a questioned word, may make said word inadmissible. The DAV Service Foundation will not be responsible for lost or delayed communications or for clerical or mechanical errors and each contestant by the act of sending in an entry agrees to be bound by the rules and instructions and, in any event, with the decision of the DAV Service Foundation and/or its Committee on Awards on any and all matters affecting the contest.

10. Any contestant who accepts help of any kind from anyone (same family or household excepted) will be disqualified. Sworn statements to this effect will be required from all winners and every reasonable effort will be made to enforce this rule.

FOLLOW THESE INSTRUCTIONS TO SOLVE THIS DAVogram PUZZLE

- Identify the six objects at the top of the puzzle. (The name of each object is a six-letter word.)
- See the table of letter values below the puzzle. Each letter is worth a certain number of points. If you have exactly named the objects you will find that the total value of the 36 letters that spell out the names of the six objects is 743 points. If you don't arrive at 743 points then try again, for the 36 letters must add up to 743 points.
- Now your job is to place those words, correctly spelled, into the shaded letter-paths, each of which has space for six letters. You can place any one of the six words in any one of the shaded paths. Each word must read from top to bottom or left to right.
- You will now note there are 13 empty white squares remaining in the diagram. Now you must insert letters of your own choosing into those 13 white squares and by combining these letters with the interlocking letters you have already filled into the gray squares, spell out 5 extra complete words. Each of these 5 extra words, too, must read from top to bottom or from left to right.
- Of course, it is easy to fill in 13 extra letters which in combination with the letters in the gray squares will spell out 5 extra different words, but remember your job is to use 13 letters that will give you a high score when the value of those extra letters (as shown in the table of letter values) is added to the 743 points you will have already earned if you identified the pictured objects correctly.

SEE SAMPLE PUZZLE BELOW And Read How We Solved It!

DIAGRAM No. 1

DIAGRAM No. 2

We show here how to go about solving a DAVogram, and how to work out alternate answers to get higher scores.

First we identified the objects pictured: RABBIT... SADDLE... HAMMER... KETTLE... and then we added up the value of all the letters in the names of these four objects (using the table of letter values given for the Official Puzzle) and found the total was 467 points. Next, we filled in these four names in the four shaded paths and then added 10 extra letters which gave us 3 extra words: GLOOM... HARBOR... BUILD. These 10 extra letters which we had filled into the white squares had a total value of 161 points, thus giving us a total score of 628 points when added to the letters we had filled into the shaded squares.

Then we tried again, and with some thought we changed our 10 extra letters and got three different extra words, as you can see in Diagram No. 2. We changed GLOOM to CLAIM, HARBOR to HORROR and BUILD to BUOLE. We thus obtained a total of 210 points for the 10 extra letters we filled into the white spaces, giving ourselves a total score of 677. Of course there are only two possible solutions and perhaps we might have done even better by shuffling the four identified names around into different shaded letter paths. Now, if you get the idea, why not try your hand at the Official Puzzle.

order of the United Nations site uptown on the East River, and they have a disquieting awareness that the Port of New York is the carotid artery of the North American continent and the nations of the West. There, as at the other "downtown colleges"—Columbia, CCNY, City College of Los Angeles and a half dozen more similar urban schools—the American Communist Party is attempting an intellectual attack on the American Theory.

"Marxian principles are like the law of gravity operating on the flow of water," said the big man in the made-over army uniform. He was a senior, a married veteran living in the frontroom of a Greenwich Village tenement with his wife, a ballet student, on his GI allotment.

"Marx predicted conditions today like you could predict water running downhill. Monopoly capitalism in its last stages—dependent upon a war economy to keep going. What's true in England today will be true here tomorrow. As the profit system rots the nation, they paint the outside of the crumbling structure with socialism.

"The United States is desperate today—and only a handful of its people know it. We make alliances with all the fascists—Franco in Spain, Perón in the Argentine, the Soongs in China. If Hitler and Mussolini were alive they'd be our allies.

"Marx was so right. Only our $15 billion military budget is keeping American business from complete collapse—and the next depression is the last one.

"There will be a Soviet Socialist Union of the World within my lifetime—do you think, knowing that's going to happen, that I can be interested in anything else?"

Half a dozen students at one school, as many as a hundred at another, all using the same words to express the same idea.

1 NORTHWESTERN, CHICAGO CAMPUS

But Karl Marx and his thinking have moved into a new position in the minds of other young men at American colleges. The bearded founder of Communism is neither the sacrosanct prophet that he has been to a continuing minority through the years, nor is he the crackpot revolutionist he has been to the disinterested majority. He is just an amateur with a theory.

"Marx died about 60 years ago," began the stocky economics major as we walked westward from the lake near Northwestern University's downtown branch on the Near North side of Chicago. "In his time any economist, the classical orthodox boys as well as Marx, had about the same technical understanding of their field as the weather forecasters of their time had about weather and climate. None of them could have recognized a Shinola box—to put it bluntly. Those birds could predict the economic future six months ahead like they could predict the winner of a 2-year-old maiden filly race at a half-mile track. They couldn't even second guess right.

"A lot of big brains have been studying the situation since then, but it doesn't look to me like they'd got out of the old ruts. For instance I was looking over a first year textbook in economics that three of our professors at Northwestern have just finished. It's a brand-new, 1948 college textbook on economics—and it's filled with the same old malarkey, a lot of cut and dried theories about how things are supposed to work because they worked that way, more or less, in the past. Nothing about 'power' or 'energy' and only little over a page on 'productivity.' What do those guys think makes the American system run so well when other capitalist systems have balled up and gone under?"

"I might as well tell you that my generation is tired of that old stuff. We've got a functioning system in this country that's given

Sometimes women have to carry the banners

PERHAPS you'll see the story of Joan of Arc, as portrayed on the screen by Miss Ingrid Bergman.

It's a thrilling episode in the world's history, proving that sometimes a woman must take the lead in the fight she believes in.

Modern women, too, must often pick up the banners . . . in their struggle for the security and well-being of their family.

Though earning the necessities of life is primarily a man's job, sometimes it takes a woman to insure her family's future by setting them on the only sure road to security . . . through adequate, regular savings.

For the modern woman, there is one foolproof method of winning her fight for savings. It's United States Savings Bonds—an investment with the soundest backing in the world . . . an investment that pays back four dollars for every three.

And there are two foolproof savings plans, too. One is the Payroll Savings Plan, for those on a company payroll. The other is the Bond-A-Month Plan, for those not on a payroll, whereby bonds are purchased through the checking account.

If your home is your career, urge your husband, and all other working members of your family, to start now—today—on the bond-saving plan for which they are eligible.

If you are working, sign up yourself at your firm or bank, and influence the other working members of your family to do the same.

Soon the bonds will start piling up.

Soon you'll know that confidence in the future which only comes through saving.

It's a wonderful feeling for anyone. And for a woman—how doubly wonderful!

more people full and satisfactory lives than any other system in history. A lot of us feel like farm kids that know a motor inside and out watching Grandpop foul up a helluva fine tractor engine and we stand there and can't say anything because Grandpop bought the damn tractor.

"If the United States could sail into a war on just a Sunday morning's notice, send 13 million men and a quarter of a trillion dollars' worth of equipment over the entire planet, win the war with less than half the expected casualties—and develop atomic energy without working up a sweat or worrying about the three billion dollars it cost—then there's no damn reason why we can't keep our people living full and satisfactory lives in peacetime. That's my personal answer to these guys in the Kremlin and all the men I know feel the same way."

An instructor at U.C.L.A. commented, "A lot of students think along those lines. The war proved the strength and the flexibility of the American system. These ex-GIs are convinced that no other nation is in the same league as the U.S. It's hard to guess what their reaction would be to a serious depression like the one of the early '30s. Remember that most of these boys have grown up during a period of economic security and expansion."

"They've never seen the system when it's been sick and I don't believe they would have much patience with it. Don't forget that these boys are used to having the government handle things, and it's my belief that if there were a serious economic slump in this country they would insist that the federal government take whatever steps were necessary to end it."

"What I mean is that they would demand something that would make the New Deal look like a thank-you note by Robert Taft. It's not that they're weaklings or radicals—they just wouldn't have any patience with hard times."

"Don't miss noting that the traditional cleavage between college students and their parents is almost altogether a thing of the past," pointed out the dean of men at Southwest Missouri State College. "It used to be that by the time a boy became a junior or senior he was separated from his folks by a proud little language of his own, a different picture of the world and—too often—a feeling that they were awkward and behind the times. They, in turn, would be resentful, indignant and sometimes feel inferior."

"That must have been particularly true of the '20s, when the young people put so much value on money, social position and conformity to the styles of the times. In the '30s there was a different situation. The world then seemed to be sinking into a hopeless poverty and a lot of those depression students felt that they were entirely on their own because the older generation had botched things up so badly."

"But these boys—especially the veterans who were overseas—have a fine respect for their parents and the kind of life their parents have achieved. That may be more true in a prosperous farming section such as the country around our college than at the big universities. But I know these boys have a good healthy respect for their parents' way of thinking."

HARVARD'S YARD

Con conversationally, at least, college men are less influenced by Marx than by Freud, less interested in economics than in personal motivations. In spite of this, however, they are not nearly the unquestioning admirers of psychoanalysts that advertising men and movie people are, among others.

"I think that these psychoanalysts are on the right track, but they must be pretty crude as yet." Two Harvard men were riding the subway into Boston and this conversation was a development of the theme, "Why do people invariably get themselves in trouble if given half a chance?"

"They've got to work closer with the biochemists. They can't just keep acting as if the mind was a rarified ghost and everything was mental," added the short blond junior. "I wouldn't be surprised if psychiatry eventually disappeared into biochemistry."

"They ought to have some good psychiatrist go over all of the top government officials in every country. I'll bet half of them are a little off the trolley."

"That was in Li'l Abner a couple of years ago. They passed a law that all senators had to pass a sanity test or something. Al Capp called the two psychiatrists Dr. Krafft and Dr. Ebbing. If I remember right some real United States senators protested that Al Capp was making fun of a noble body."

"Still it's a good idea. There's no way of telling now whether a senator or any other important man in government doesn't have paranoiac impulses—suppose the Secretary of State was a paranoiac for example?"

"It's up to the men around him to spot any signs of being ready for the puzzle house. I bet that's the reason some of the big wheels suddenly vanish from the government—they've blown their tops and—whoosh—off to a quiet place in the country."

"But how many of those men around a big wheel are equipped to notice any mental funny business? I bet in a few years any prospect for government office will have to be cleared by a psychiatrist."

"They ought to have psychiatrists examine all teachers, too. I'll guarantee you that some instructors are strictly psychos. Look at all the damage they can do."

"Everybody ought to be examined by psychiatrists. You know you can study history now and it's plain that some of the important men all through history were the worst kind of psychos and nobody knew it at the time."

"I wonder how many big names now could get a clean bill from Menninger or some other psychiatrist?"

"Somebody ought to invent a good nickel slot-machine psychological examiner!"

"That's where the biochemists will come in. I'll bet that in a few years they'll be able to run a blood sample through some tests and give you an emotional and mental analysis of yourself for a couple of bucks and it'll be a lot more accurate than any story of your life from a couch."

Opportunity in the South

THE dean of the Law School of the University of Mississippi pointed out a change in the direction of the young men of the South. "The law offices of New York City are filled with Southerners who headed North as soon as they got their degrees. There didn't seem to be much chance for a young man except in a big city, and the bigger the better."

"We'll admit that we have a special situation here in Mississippi. This used to be one of the richest states in the nation, but for 80 years after the Civil War most of the best of our young men left Mississippi. The timid, the shortsighted, the miserly and the stupid ones stayed behind. That's a combination of talents guaranteed to impoverish any state. Those men seemed to think there were only so many dollars in the world, and if they let somebody else get ahold of one of them that was one less for them. Between that kind of thinking, being treated like a colony by the North and with our best young men going to the cities of the North, Mississippi became the poorest state in the nation."

"But these young men today have different ideas. They tell me that there's less opportunity in a big city than there is in a small town today. There's less opportunity in the North than there is in the South. We're going to keep our best young men instead of exporting them. And it's the quality of the young men in a community that decides that community's fate."

A student at Ole Miss supplemented the dean. "We're getting to feel that the only way you can measure the wealth of a state—or a nation—is by its people, all of its people. If most of its people are poor it's a poor state, regardless of how rich the Delta Council is. We don't want to live in a poor state, and it would still be a poor state if the black half remains poor. So that's the job we've got facing us—making the people of Mississippi prosperous, black people as well as white people. It isn't going to be easy."

This attitude on race relations is not common to any large number of Southern university students, but it seems to be becoming more popular.

"I'm in favor of giving every person in the United States equal opportunity to hold the best job that he can handle and that's all," said a Jewish student at the University of Chicago. "From then on it's up to him—and I don't want to hear any more moaning about discrimination. There's one rule of nature I'd like to see printed on the top of every daily newspaper every day—'It's always the injured party's own fault. No complaints accepted from losers.' That's a basic rule for all living things, and I'm fed up to here with various kinds of people whining they're not getting a fair share. That's what I like about the Jews in Israel—they've stopped moaning and started taking care of themselves."

Beyond all of these interests in jobs, economics, politics and social welfare is the top priority interest of all healthy young males.

"What is there to say about the college man and sex?" shrugged a junior at Ohio State. "Dr. Kinsey put it all so well. The average college man has 2.7 sexual expressions per week—that may not be the exact figure, but does that matter?"

"By the way, the most interesting thing about that silly book was the way people fell over themselves buying it at 6½ bucks per copy—that's the real commentary on the state of sex in America. Ha!"

"Maybe there's a little less hysteria about sex among college men than there used to be. You're bound to get excited and restless, but I don't think we worry as much about it as they seem to have before the war. You try to get as much as you can the best way you know how, unless you have some unusual moral scruples or inhibitions. If you don't take it too seriously everything's all right. You can put this down—the girls are getting smarter all the time."

Another point of view from U.C.L.A.: "I wish the sex deal didn't seem so awkward. We don't have any clear sexual code in this country. Everything depends on chance—you're with one crowd and they practically have season tickets at a motel, you're with another crowd and sex is strictly a love kick. You go to another college and maybe three guys are getting something and the rest are talking about it. The whole damn thing's pretty awkward."

A question from a large state university: "Am I just seeing things or are there getting to be an awful lot of queers?"

Faculty members are in fairly general agreement that the college man of '49 seems to be handling his sexual drives with more finesse than the boys of yesteryear. "Maybe they're not so moral if you judge them by what's supposed to be, but by their own standards their morals are fine."

"I had a funny thought a couple of nights ago," said a Yale chemistry senior as we walked toward Sterling Memorial Library. "I'd been to church with my father, mother and sister that morning. That evening I began to wonder about churches and religion and God. I've talked to some of my friends about it since."

"We all belong to fairly religious families and we all go to church regularly ourselves. None of us are Catholics so our ideas are based on the Protestant churches."

"We agreed on a lot of points. Religion has become something else than an approach to God. The churches have more the purpose of fraternities. After one of my friends made that comparison we all thought about it and finally we agreed that's what churches are like—fraternities.

"Each fraternity has some mystic symbolism in its rituals to make it seem important and kind of permanent but that mystic symbolism doesn't have much to do with the fraternity or its members. Everybody just casually accepts it as something wonderful and mysterious and vague. Then you forget it."

"The real point to the fraternity is that you don't feel so alone. You're accepted by a group of other men, and all of you in the house feel that you are a part of something. You've set yourself off from the rest, and you've got symbols and traditions and mutual acceptance to hold you together. When you stop to look at it that's what our churches amount to."

"Every Sunday as long as I can remember I've gone to my church and the only thing that impresses me of all those years is that what Jesus said isn't nearly so important to my church as they make out."

"It's damn easy to criticize any church and damn hard to help make a church mean something," said a Northwestern dental student. "All any church can do is give you something besides an animal reason for living in a world where just about everything else is trying to kill you by one means or another."

"As the human race plunges forward in time to wherever it's going the size of that reason changes. If there's any trouble with religion today it's that they haven't enlarged the reason to keep up with the size of the question. That well-known old-time religion is a shallow and selfish one if you get right down to it—about all it amounts to is a deal between the individual and a Father-God for the individual's benefit.

"Neither science nor psychoanalysis is ever going to give a satisfying answer to that question of 'why?'—that's for religion and faith. But if you have to draw a line around your faith and say 'I believe this because I was told to believe it and I'm not going to question it at all' there isn't any faith there."

"Our churches seem kind of musty because the seminaries and theological schools filter out everybody who doesn't conform to their particular dogmas, and those dogmas don't meet the size of our question today."

"Some churches fudge on the problem. They go in for ethics and goodwill between men, which is fine and noble, but it's sociology and not religion. Religion has one job—to provide a basis for faith in living, and a reason that's greater than the animal's reason for struggling to keep alive. I don't know a man at school who isn't looking for that kind of faith."

Cal Tech, Carnegie, M.I.T., Cornell—these are potent names in the land today. But there are many others—engineering schools at little colleges and big universities—which join in this potency. At these schools are the young men who are exploring the essential mysteries of time, space, energy and life.

From the course list of Cornell University: "Theory of High Energy Phenomena: Dirac equation, Klein-Nishina formulas, pair production, Bremsstrahlung of electrons and mesons, production of mesons." A graduate course which is directed toward the understanding and control of the forces in that special concept of space within the nucleus of the atom where matter and energy are exchangeable in a time field as yet beyond concept—a graduate course for matter-of-fact young men in crew haircuts, easygoing young men who are apt to enjoy beer or boxing, pleasant-talking young men to whom Los Alamos is Fulton's steamboat or Wright's airplane.

"Riding home on the bus after school gives me an odd feeling—here are all these people, particularly the kids, and they don't realize what's happening," said the young man from Cal Tech.

"Sure they appreciate stuff like atomic bombs and supersonic planes, but they think things are just going to be bigger or faster and better. What's actually going to happen is that everything is going to be different—they haven't got the vaguest idea of what the world's going to be like that they're going to live in. There's going to be a bigger difference between human customs in 1969 and today than there is between today's customs and those of 1949 B.C. And these people I see on the bus going home—along with all the rest of us—are going to have to live through that change and make some deep adjustments."

"When I'm at school and things seem pretty routine I forget what we're doing and where we're going—and then I'll think of the gene studies that probably will change the human race more in the next few generations than let's say selective breeding has done to milk cattle in the last 500 years, or of the electronics boys at M.I.T. and their servomotor robots—intelligent, faithful, accurate and untricking—or the computer men at the Moore School with their machines that will solve a problem involving several hundred thousand separate and simultaneous calculations in a few hours, or the guided missile and upper atmosphere men at Guggenheim Lab here who already live in a world of 10 miles per second speeds and man-made satellites, or the biochemists at Chicago to whom life is a series of electronic and molecular relationships that are becoming more obviously understandable by the minute, and all the rest of us—patient, relentless and ruthless. Then I ride home with these people on the Pasadena bus and I think, 'Don't you realize what we're doing to you and your world? You ought to be excited and frightened and be preparing for it'—and then I realize that they're doing just the right thing, taking it day by day."

The Inside Story ON YOUR NEW ARMY

... the story of what the men of your Army do, of how they live. Their jobs are important ... their skills many ... their lives productive and interesting.

AFTER HOURS

Like you and the fellow next door, the soldier has time for recreation and relaxation. For example, these members of the First Infantry Division—now stationed in Germany to help guard the peace—have time after hours for taking part in sports, seeing the sights and visiting places of historical interest.

EXECUTIVE AT WORK!

As in other businesses, Army men today have jobs of real responsibility—like this sergeant of the Eighth Infantry Division who is instructing in marksmanship. Today's non-commissioned and commissioned officers must have leadership ability, specialized knowledge, human understanding of men.

A BETTER LIFE for you tomorrow. A more efficient and economical Army today! These are the results of research work which modern soldiers—like these men of the Second Infantry Division—are doing. The work varies from studying the effects of intense cold on equipment to devising new communication techniques.

3300 VEHICLES of all sizes, shapes and descriptions—from small jeeps to tanks like these of the Second Armored Division—are used by a streamlined Armored Division. All must be kept at peak operating condition. That's why so many men benefit from the Army's technical school training—the finest in the world!

MANEUVERS like those of the 82nd Airborne Division above—are vitally important in the life of today's soldier. Here all of the knowledge gained in technical schools and classrooms is put to practical use. Here new methods and procedures are evolved ... leadership discovered ... teamwork developed!

CHOW TIME! Today's soldier gets the best food in the world—the finest meat and vegetables grown! And your Regular Army keeps diets and menus varied and interesting. All Army men are well-fed no matter where they may be ... even when on field maneuvers like these men of the Third Infantry Division.

DEMOCRACY AT WORK! Your Army helped win the peace today its members are working to protect it. Wherever they are—in Germany, Korea or Japan—they spread the American way of life. These members of the First Cavalry Division, for instance, are your "on-the-spot" ambassadors of good will in Japan.

RUDOLPH'S BODY lay in state at the emperor's palace in Vienna. The top of his head, blown off by his own pistol shot, was plastered and bandaged in order to hide the real cause of his death. Burns on his face were covered with pink wax and flowers strewn over his trigger finger, which froze in the crooked firing position.

The Truth about Mayerling

BOOK SHEDS NEW LIGHT ON A FAMOUS OLD ROMANCE

On the morning of Jan. 30, 1889 the blood-spattered bodies of Prince Rudolf, the 30-year-old heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne and Mary Vetsera, a pretty young Viennese society girl, were discovered in the royal hunting lodge at Mayerling. It was clear that Rudolf had shot his companion, and then blown the top of his head off. Ever since, the death pact of these lovers has been regarded as one of the most romantic tragedies of modern times, a tragedy supposedly precipitated by the emperor's refusal to countenance the marriage of his son to the 17-year-old beauty.

Another version of the story has recently been published, completely demolishing this romantic legend. In a book called Rudolph: The Tragedy of Mayerling (Scribners, $5) a Hungarian-born count, Carl Lonyay, reveals hitherto secret documents left to him by his uncle who married none other than Rudolf's widow. When his aunt and uncle died, Lonyay decided that the world and its romanticists should know the facts.

Rudolph, according to Count Lonyay, was not in love with Mary at all. In fact he had spent the previous night with another woman. Mary was infatuated. A sensual coquette, an avid reader of improper books, she had been having affairs since she was 16. Rudolf, afflicted by venereal disease in his youth, neurotic, addicted to drugs and alcohol, had been contemplating suicide for months. He liked to study the convulsions of dying animals and had even proposed suicide pacts to other people who refused. But Mary proved to be a willing suicidal companion, delighted with the idea of being found dead in the crown prince's bed.

Rudolph's twisted personality is believed by Lonyay to have been formed when he was a child. Sensitive and artistic, he was schooled to be tough by a tutor who liked to awaken him in the middle of the night with a volley of pistol shots. Another more enlightened tutor taught him the arts and sciences. But when Rudolf developed liberal leanings, court intriguers replaced the tutor with another whose job was to convert Rudolf into a harmless rake. Rudolf soon compiled a classified index of women he had loved. His marriage to the Princess Stephanie, the best available candidate, made matters worse. Stephanie was ugly and too stupid even to make out a menu. Something like the Mayerling tragedy was inevitable. Mary Vetsera was nothing more than Rudolf's foolish but willing instrument.

Helen: Your dinner last night was wonderful!

Jane: Thanks, dear. It was certainly simple -- just fish and ...

Helen: Wine! That Sauterne you served was perfect!

Jane: California Sauterne, Helen. It does wonders for fish!

Helen: I'd like to try it tomorrow night. But -- is it expensive?

Jane: That's the best part. Sauterne wine from California costs so little we can afford to serve it often!

Wine Advisory Board,
717 Market St., San Francisco 3, California

RUDOLPH AT 17 was a sensitive, neurotic product of years of royal inbreeding. His two grandmothers, in fact were sisters. A good student, Rudolph had a flare for languages and was a witty after dinner speaker. At one time he wrote revolutionary articles for a liberal Viennese newspaper.

FRANCIS JOSEPH, emperor of the Austro-Hungarian empire, was Rudolph's father. Lonyay pictures him an ignorant brute who couldn't even write his own speeches. His cold attitude helped cause Rudolph's neuroticism. Hearing of suicide, he was more furious than sad, tried to hush it up.

RUDOLPH AT ABOUT 20 posed for this picture in the braided uniform of a lieutenant general of the imperial army. He became a colonel the day after his birth, a major general at 20, a lieutenant general at 21. Fascinated by pomp, he did fairly well in the army although he was a physical coward.

EMPERESS ELIZABETH, mother of Rudolph, came from a ducal, non-reigning family in the empire. Unconventional and restless, she was bored with court life and with her husband from whom she separated in 1862. Suffering from lung trouble, she traveled constantly and saw little of her son.

Rudolf.

TELEGRAM to Stephanie was sent by Rudolph from Mayerling on the day he blew out his brains. He was supposed to attend the emperor's dinner in Vienna that same night, but his wire to his wife explained perfunctorily: "Please write papa that I respectfully beg his pardon for not being able to come to the dinner, but I do not care to risk the drive with my bad cold and think it best to stay here. . . ." After composing several other last-minute death messages, Rudolph shot Mary about midnight, then took some 10 hours to summon up enough courage to shoot himself.

ARCHDUCHESS ELIZABETH, nicknamed Erzsi, was an only child of Rudolph and Stephanie. Rudolph was fond of her and remembered her in a farewell note to Stephanie found near his body at Mayerling: "Dear Stephanie—You are now released . . . and freed from torment. Be happy in your own way. Be kind to the little one, who is all that remains of me. Give my last greetings to all my acquaintances. . . . I go to my death calmly. Death alone can save my good name." Erzsi married twice, became a socialist and was once known as the Red Princess.

THE HABSBURGS OBJECT

Count Lonyay's unflattering book naturally stirred up high indignation among the living Habsburgs. The heir to the Austria throne, 37-year-old Archduke Otto (below), who is known to U.S. lecture audiences, has made no public comment since the book's appearance. But one of his cousins, Franz Joseph, has sent out letters to New York City booksellers warning them that the book is "scandalous, libelous, defamatory and is a scurrilous attack on deceased members of the Habsburg family." The publishers of the book promptly replied that they were prepared to defend it in any court action. But so far no action has been taken.

HABSBURG PRETENDER to nonexistent Austrian throne is Archduke Otto, living in U.S. He is Rudolph's first cousin once removed.

Life Goes to a Classical Ball

Fashionable Parisians dress up to look like the gods and goddesses of ancient Rome at costume party

ORSON WELLES and Dancer Katherine Dunham were among guests. Welles, who was on a quick trip through town, wore only a tuxedo but called costumes "wonderful."

There are numberless legends woven about the frolics of the eternal gods and goddesses when they descend from Olympus to mingle with the mortals. These pictures show what happened when a group of Parisians decided to reverse the journey at a costume ball given by the Gilbert Orcels. The Orcels are among the most successful of Paris hat designers, and like all fashionable Parisians have their own tight social set. Their friends are recruited about equally from the world of arts, theater and letters and from the Faubourg St. Honore, a smart shopping and residential district which once ranked with the Faubourg St. Germain as the most aristocratic and exclusive in all Paris.

The Orcels' party started around midnight. It got under way rather slowly as the guests, their stomachs peeping out from under scanty suits of unfamiliar armor, wandered self-consciously about the sumptuous Orcel apartment. But their host had thoughtfully laid in 200 bottles of champagne, and things soon livened up. The Minotaur, who according to mythology lived on a diet of tender boys and girls, took off his heavy headdress and had a sandwich. A pretty girl dressed as Flora, goddess of flowers, avoided the charges of a determined Mars by skipping around the dining-room table, and Castor gossiped with Pollux. By dawn the gods and goddesses were ready to call it a night. All agreed that it had been a delightful party and a credit to the Faubourg in every way.

Olympic swimming champion never has a chance when she matches strokes with a trained seal

JUMBO IN A SPECIAL FREE-STYLE EVENT AT CHICAGO SPORTSMAN'S SHOW

The happy pair above is about to start one of the most ludicrous contests in the history of sport. They are Ann Curtis, last year's Olympic 400-meter swimming champion, and a male seal named Jumbo. Twice daily at the Chicago Sportsman's Show they poised thus before plunging into the pool and racing 20 yards to the opposite end. Spectators gathered in ever-increasing numbers for a week hoping for a triumph of their species over the seal. Jumbo, however, denied them this pleasure. Blissfully ignorant of Miss Curtis' 36 U.S. and three world records, he repeatedly slipped into the water and slithered the full length before his opponent reached the halfway mark even with the aid of swim fins.

ACTORS' FACES

HENRY HULL demonstrates why actors' faces are extra-sensitive. Removing heavy stage make-up can be a slow, painful process—and hard on the skin. No wonder so many stars rely on gentle Williams for easy-on-the-face shaving.

Actors' faces are extra-sensitive

THAT'S WHY HENRY HULL SHAVES WITH SOOTHING WILLIAMS SHAVING CREAM

"It's only natural that rubbing off stage make-up should make an actor's face sensitive," says Henry Hull, well-known star of stage and screen. "But I still get smooth, easy shaves when I use Williams Shaving Cream. It never stings or irritates... takes the fight out of the toughest whiskers."

A shaving cream can be gentle to the skin only when it is made of mild, top-quality ingredients—blended carefully as a doctor's prescription. And that's how Williams Shaving Cream is made . . . with a unique skill resulting from over one hundred years' experience.

Smooth, comfortable shaves

Williams creamy, soaking lather softens tough beards completely. It lets your razor shave closely and cleanly—and it leaves your face feeling smoother and refreshed. Get a tube of Williams today.

If you prefer a brushless shave, you'll find the same luxurious shaving cream qualities in the new heavier and richer Williams Brushless Cream.

For the perfect finish to any shave, enjoy a refreshing dash of cool, tingling, cleanly scented AQUA VELVA. It's the world's most popular After-Shave lotion.
